MAYOR WALKER and the German-Irish fliers were heard in Berlin and Dublin, as they exchanged politenesses in New York, 3,000 miles away. Radio has made the world small, and flying should make it friendly.

These fliers will be able to tell Europe that this nation has put away bitter memories of the war.

THE Italians with Nobile on his second trip to the North Pole, are building in the Caproni shops, at Milan, what will be the biggest heavier-than-air ship ever constructed. All metal, it will carry six engines of 1,000 horsepower each. An autocracy has it advantages. It can encourage the ingenious, and get things done.

RELIGION'S faith gives consolation, but sometimes it causes worry.

News from Morocco tells of two Moors guillotined for murder. They wept, showing intense distress and sorrow when told their heads were to come off. Mohammed says a body with a head cut off can't enter Paradise.

IN the great Indian rebellion, when natives murdered many Englishmen, soldiers played its part. The rebellion ended when the natives were obliged to grease cartridges smeared with pig fat. Many of the guilty were executed by being tied from cannon, their bodies blown to pieces. In that condition they could hardly carry out their afterlife plans.

CHRISTIANITY is kinder. It teaches that the dust of the grave and the feeding of the worms do not prevent rising in the flesh, "as you were."

ONE hundred men, women and children found mummified in a cave in Mexico are believed to have been buried alive. Contortions of the dried bodies showed acute suffering before death. Some mummies were tied together by their thumbs.

THE dead may have been offered as sacrifices to some ancient Mexican god to placate a demon regulating earthquakes. The Chinese believe in an earth dragon and are careful not to disturb him. Mexicans came originally from Asia.

AMONG barbarous peoples, as described by Reclus in his "Man and the Earth," sentencing the old to death when they became useless was a common practice. Old Eskimos were made to enter an ice hut, the entrance then blocked with ice and nature left to take her course.

We are more civilized and simply leave the old to worry in poverty or die slowly in a poorhouse when their useful days are over.

"TO discourage vice, make it expensive."

Thus was the old poker player's remark, as he "raised." To discourage stock speculation, the money powers make money expensive, and that plan works.

"Call money" went to 6 per cent the other day, discouraging some. It did not, however, discourage the speculators in stocks. They went sailing up. The oil wagon is the vehicle of the day.

POSTMASTER GENERAL NEW calls Secretary Hoover "a true American" saying:

"No man has done more to demonstrate American intelligence and capacity."

The statement that Hoover "has leaned toward Great Britain" makes the British laugh. It was Hoover that first exposed and exploded the British rubber trust that was to take hundreds of millions a year from the Yankees.

Miss Pirchner, one of the group, suffered injuries which caused her death. Murray Plater, city food inspector, is in the hospital with a fractured skull suffered in the accident. SCHOOL PUPILS PROSTRATED AT BUILDING HERE

Strange Illness of Eight Children Mystifies Doctor and Parents

NO SIGN OF GAS FUMES

Heat and Over Exertion Possible Cause, Health Officer Says After Investigation

Parents of eight pupils of the Silver Street School, all girls, were puzzling today over the cause of the sudden illness of the youngsters during school hours yesterday.

After Helen Haubert, Silver-st. an eighth grade pupil, had been sent home because of "pains in her head" and a "shortage of breath" and her schoolmates began to suffer with the same symptoms, J. C. Emmons, principal of the school, becoming alarmed, called Dr. W. J. Weiser, city health commissioner, who sent the children home and investigated the cause of their illness.

That the heat and over-exertion had brought about the girls' sudden prostration was the theory of Dr. Weiser, who, after an investigation, was unable to detect gas fumes in any room of the building. The teachers and other students noticed no odor of gas and were unaffected.

Happens After Assembly

It was shortly after an assembly, when the girls had appeared on an athletic program, that they became ill. Although the room was well-ventilated and not overly-warm, it is thought excitement of appearing in the program together with the abnormal heat of strenuous exercises may have been the cause of their illness.

They suffered from pains in the head, shortage of breath and prostration, Dr. Weiser said, in diagnosing the unusual case today. All were reported to be improved today and two of the girls, Annabelle Emmons, Avondale-av, an eighth grade pupil, and Ruby Schroll, Leo-st, a seventh grade student, were able to return to their lessons in the afternoon.

Most Serious Case

Helen Haubert, the first to become ill, seems to be in the most serious condition. The other girls are Helen Leonard, Thompson-st; Elnora Hood, 615 Leo-st, seventh grade pupils; Sarah Large, Evans-st, a sixth grade pupil; Norma James, Davids-st and Ella Large, Evans-st, fifth grade pupils. Two of the girls affected, Sarah and Ella Large, are sisters.

ACCUSE WOMAN OF SHOOTING HUSBAND

Mrs. W. M. Henry To Face Charge in Kenton Court, Prosecutor Says

Kenton, May 5—Charges of shooting with intent to kill are to be filed against Mrs. W. M. Henry, colored, in connection with the shooting of her husband in their home here last night, according to a statement made by Prosecuting Attorney Loecks D. Brown.

Henry, in a hospital with revolver wounds in his chest and hip, told officials that his wife shot him while he slept. Mrs. Henry denies her husband's charge, asserting that he attempted to kill her and then turned the gun on himself, following a quarrel.

Amateur Gardeners Routed As Balmy Breezes Vanish

AMATEUR gardeners who yesterday were beaming upon the results of two days' intensive spading were casting dubious glances in the direction of the garden and leaden skies today. The change in attitude came as a result of a sudden drop in temperature accompanied by a cold rain which made conditions for newly planted seeds not so favorable.

Reports from regions in the central Mississippi Valley show that temperature there dropped from 90 edgrees to near the freezing point in a few hours. A drop of as much as 21 degrees was recorded in one hour.

The weather man explains the change in temperature as a temporary victory of the northwest winds over the balmy southern breezes.

A new high temperature mark for the year was set in Marion yesterday when the mercury went to 87. Low for the day was 46. In comparison with the same day last year, yesterday was hot. High for a year ago was 66 while the low was 46.

Tonight the skies are to clear but the temperature will not begin its return to normal until Sunday according to the forecast.

GRAND JURY TO INVESTIGATE 10 CASES MONDAY

Wide Variety of Charges Included in List Prepared for Session

MAY TERM OPENING

Petit Jury Will Convene May 15 To Start Trial Proceedings

The grand jury drawn for the May term of Common Pleas Court will have 10 cases to consider when it convenes Monday to open the term, according to Prosecuting Attorney Frank Wiedemann.

Following the session of the grand jury the petit jury will convene on Tuesday, May 15. The first case to come before the petit jury will probably be the Edward F. Sharpless Sunday movie case, which was continued from the present term of court after a jury had disagreed.

Although Sharpless is among those whose cases are to come before the new grand jury, it thought that he will be retried on one of the four former indictments returned against him.

Cases to be considered by the Grand Jury Monday range all the way from horse stealing to defrauding a gasoline station operator.

List of Cases

The following have been bound over to the grand jury:

Harold Temple, selling mortgaged property.

Leslie Gear, issuing checks without funds.

James Early, horse stealing.

Floyd Davis, assault and battery.

Homer Hickman, defrauding gasoline station operator.

Lester Floyd, defrauding gasoline station operator.

Edward F. Sharpless, operating a Sunday motion picture show.

Paul Shetzley, burglary of an uninhabited house.

Leonard Brooks, burglary of an uninhabited house.

Lewis Parthemer, robbery.

Since being bound over to the grand jury, Hickman and Floyd have been returned to West Virginia to answer charges of automobile stealing. For this reason their cases may not result in action by the grand jury. They were charged with having purchased gasoline from a filling station in Caledonia last winter and driving away without paying their bill.

AMERICANS AT TSINAN SAFE

Grave International Crisis Feared as Japanese Block Chinese

BULLETIN

London, May 5—All Americans at Tsinan have reached places of safety, according to advices from Peking this afternoon.

Washington, May 5—An international crisis of grave potentialities is presented today in Shantung Province by the interference of Japanese troops in the northward sweep of the Nationalist forces toward Peking.

The State Department has reasserted its policy of neutrality, but is ready to protect American lives and property.

Japan, according to information received today at the British and French embassies, is determined to protect her 8,000 nationals in Shantung at any cost up to military occupation of the entire province. This step would at once frustrate, for the second time in as many years, the climatic effort of the Southern armies to capture Peking and consolidate the Nationalist revolution within the ancient capital.

May Get Beyond Control

Anti-Japanese feeling throughout China is described as riotous and there is grave fear that the situation may get out of hand on all sides.

Minister MacMurray, at Peking, advised the State Department that violent anti-Japanese pamphlets distributed in Chefoo and Tsingtao, presumably by the Chinese Nationalists, have created a situation menacing to all foreigners. American gunboats are standing by at Chefoo.

Despite continued reports of attacks upon foreigners by Chinese detachments, the powers have been unable to agree upon any policy for curbing the depredations.

The United States is unwilling to join an concerted movement against the southern armies without adequate justification under the accepted usages of international law.

Japan and England, whose interests are more closely associated with the fortunes of the Peking government, are already satisfied that due cause for their military interference is at hand.

Few Americans There

MacMurray's reports indicate little anti-American feeling among the

She sustained a severe wound in her spine when the shears penetrated her flesh.

Although the wound in itself is not serious, there is danger of blood poisoning as the shears were rusty, attending physicians stated.

25,000 FORCED TO HIGH GROUND BY DAM BURST

Giant Wall at Greenville, N. C., Begins To Crumble. Loose Water

FEAR HEAVY DAMAGE

Leak in Drain Pipe Cause; Cotton Mills, Rich Farms in Valley

Greenville, S. C., May 5—The grim spectre of devastation hovered over the rich Saluda River valley cotton mill and farming region today as the gigantic power company dam at Table Rock Cove, 50 miles from here, began crumbling, and [illegible] gallons of water began flooding over the vast area.

Engineers at the power house adjacent to the dam believed that it would be only a short while before the crumbling dam would give away entirely. Early today a small crack was discovered in the structure, and by 11 o'clock this morning this had widened to a gap of more than 50 feet.

Should the entire dam collapse, it was expected property damage would run into the millions of dollars, as the valley is dotted with cotton mills and rich farm land.

Athough the towns in the area were mostly deserted, and the people moved to higher and safer ground, it was feared there still might be some loss of life in case the giant dam suddenly breaks today. For many persons in the outlying farming districts had not left their homes, and a few remained in the towns. It was estimated that more than 25,000 persons took what belongings they could move during the night and left the valley.

Notified by Courier, Phone

By courier and by telephone the people of the valley were warned throughout the night to flee to safety.

Several large towns and cotton mill sections were in the path of the threatened deluge. There is Piedmont, a place of 4,000 inhabitants a few miles below here, the Pelzer, with a population of 6,000 or more, and further down the valley is another town, Ware Shoals.

CARS NOW USING AUXILIARY TRACK

Installation of Temporary C., D. & M. Line on W. Center-st Completed

The auxiliary track installed by the C., D. & M. Electric Co., on W. Center-st from the Hocking Valley tracks to Oak-st for use during the rebuilding of the right-of-way, has been completed and is now being used by both the city and interurban cars.

The ties of the old right-of-way have been removed and the rails cut into sections for easy removal. The bricks are also being taken up from this section of the street. The present plans of the contractors provide for the paving of this part of the street first. It is probable, however, that the repaving and widening of the north side of of the street will be started before rebuilding of the right-of-way of the C., D. & M. is completed.

Construction of the storm water and sanitary sewers, which is also to be a part of the W. Center-st improvement has progressed as far east as the new C., D. & M. station. Several delays due to cave-ins, have held back the construction of the sewers.

STARLING LOWER HERO IN RESCUE

TWINS BUT DIDN'T KNOW IT

The relative importance of heredity versus environment will provide much interesting material in the cases of these twins, Paul Harold Cavitt of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Paul Harold O'Kane of Shabbona, Ill., who have lived apart for 22 years. The boys were born in Woodland, Ill., and one was adopted by a family while the other remained in an orphanage and was subsequently adopted also. Neither knew of the existence of the other. Their various reactions are being closely studied by professors at the University of Chicago.

FORMER LOCAL MAN SAVES 3 FROM DEATH

Plunges Into Reservoir Near Akron Where Auto Crashes from Road

TWO IN CAR PERISH

Heroic Feat Performed by Lower as He Returns from Social Event

Sterling Lower, a former Marion man, was being acclaimed a hero in Akron today following his sensational rescue of three persons from drowning last night.

Lower, dressed in evening clothes, was returning from a social gathering when he saw a car immediately in front of him crash through an iron railing and plunge over an embankment into 15 feet of water in Sandy Beach reservoir.

Bringing his car to a halt near the spot where the other machine had left the road and throwing off his coat, Lower dived into the water and succeeded in bringing three of the five occupants of the car to the surface.

Two Perish

Two could not be extricated from the machine and were later taken from the water dead. Eye witnesses to the tragedy obtained a row boat and brought the victims to the shore as Lower removed them from the car.

Occupants of the death car were Frank Rosensky, 38, an Akron rubber worker, his wife Anna, 35, and three children, Anna, 10, Anthony, 21, and Jessie, 12. The father and the eldest daughter were drowned.

The three survivors were taken from the water in a semi-conscious condition. While they were being given first aid treatment the bodies of the father and Anna were being removed from the submerged machine.

Scene of Accident

The car is said to have left the road near a bridge over a narrow neck of water, connecting two large reservoirs. Anthony Rosensky who was driving, said that he had been blinded by the glare of the headlights of an approaching machine.

Lower is the son of Dr. H. J. Lower, of Summit-st. He left Marion in 1910 at the age of 23. He is now associated with a Lincoln automobile agency in Akron. A brother, Dave, is also connected with same concern as a salesman.

Lower also has a brother, Cliff Lower, proprietor of the Lower Pharmacy on W. Center-st, and a sister Mrs. C. G. Smith, 557 S. Prospect-st, living in Marion.

WORK ON THEATER PROGRESSES RAPIDLY

W. Center-st Structure Expected To Be Under Roof Next Week

Favored by ideal building weather, construction work on the new Palace theater at W. Center and Campbell-sts is progressing rapidly. The walls of the front section of the building have been practically completed, placing of terra cotta ornamental work which will adorn the walls above the entrance of the theater, has been started and with the continuation of favorable weather is expected to be completed early next week.

The walls of the theater proper at the rear are also nearing completion, having been carried nearly to the top of the steel structure. The installation of the asbestos roof, which rests directly on top of the steel frame, was started several days ago and with the continuation of the good weather will be completed next week, placing the entire building under roof.

New Type of Roof Here

The type of roof, which is similar to that put on the new C., D. & M. interurban station building on W. Center-st, is of recent introduction in this city. Sheets of heavy plaster board are fastened to the steel frame, over these sheets is placed a heavy wire netting and the entire surface is covered with a thick coating of asbestos mixture applied in the form of a plaster. This is then covered with a roof paint. The roof is said by builders to be absolutely fireproof and practically indestructible.

With the building under roof, it is expected the interior work will progress rapidly regardless of the weather and barring unlooked for contingencies will be ready for dedication on Labor Day, the date set by the Young Amusement Co. builders of the theater, for the formal opening.

ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR OHIO DELEGATES

Warner Outlines Hotel Arrangements at Meeting of Willis Group

Accommodations will be provided for at three hotels in Kansas City for Ohio's 51 delegates to the national G. O. P. Convention, Fred W. Warner of Marion, chairman of the state Republican committee, announced yesterday at a luncheon attended by 20 Willis-pledged delegates. The luncheon took place at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel.

The 20 Willis delegates probably will go to Kansas City to vote for any candidate they choose, it was indicated following the luncheon at which Col. Carmi A. Thompson, of Cleveland, campaign manager of the Willis forces, was host.

Willis delegates will travel to Kansas City in any manner they choose, but will not go in a body. Many are planning to drive. Efforts were made several weeks ago to have Hoover and Willis delegates travel on a special train.

Col. Thompson will sail Saturday for Cuba. While there he will arrange for the annual encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans to be held there in October.

Just Things

BY EDNA B. DUTTON

NO, IT WON'T

It won't be long now.

The jolly old radio entertainers who have been our boon companions for lo, these many moons, will soon fade out of the picture and we'll dust off the old picnic hamper, get the thermos bottle off the top shelf of the pantry, gather together two slices of bread separated by a huge hunk of ham, and a half dozen pickled eggs, and we're off. Even now, some of those who are wont to take to the open road with the first hint of the good old summer time have discovered more verdant and choicer picnic grounds. The first robin was sighted long ago, and I personally met the first bumble bee, strawhats, (I won't say they are this year's vintage,) have put in an appearance, arms have shed their sleeves like a caterpillar does his cocoon, so all we lack is time for our annual frolic with the ants and their kin.

OH, FOR LIGHTS

I THINK most of us will heave a sigh of relief when the new lights are in at the main stem of the village. If you crave thrills just spend a little time negotiating the four crossings at Main and Center-sts. I think even the folks that seemingly always can maintain a calm and collected mien, under the most extreme exasperating circumstances would forget they were ladies and hurl verbal darts unbecoming to them who on every other occasion seem to the manner born. Of course I had my feathers ruffled which is the cause of the explosion. There is very probable two sides to the question but I call it adding insult to injury when an autoist nearly runs over you and then bawls you out for being there. This particular motorist was entirely too close to me for comfort and then insinuated that it might be well for me to consult an ear doctor. Of course, I retorted that she might at least take heed of where she was going and intimated that her oculist might be out of the city. That's all there was true for, for she continued on her way and I did likewise but if any one heard the conversation he was not in doubt as to the fact we meant what we said. Of course, I hope now that what I wished then doesn't really happen to her and I suppose by this time she hopes that what she wished would happen to me doesn't take place.

PERSONALITY

DOES the perfume you buy express your personality. Just listen to this:

The vivid, "red head" can add a quiet air to her personality by using yellow violet, while the blonde should find perfume made from the attar of yellow firefly rose most appealing.

A pure sandalwood or natural jasmine contains an exotic yet sinuously fragile fragrance which will interpret the personality of the slow-eyed Oriental type, who is rather delicate in appearance.

The pale, languid chamer finds expression in the blending of the Southern magnolia with tuberose and jonquil. Another blend for this same type that is extremely youthful and fresh is found in a combination of olibanum, vetiver and lots of ylang-ylang.

Narcissus is the ideal scent for the dark-haired, fair-skinned, scarlet-lipped beauty.

The modest woman is the hardest to help. She feels the esthetic need of a delicate scent and yet she is fearful of offending by an ill-choice of perfume. And for this type gardenia, combined with narcissus, neroli, tuberose, and just a wee drop of musk is ideal.

A drop on the handkerchief, another on the underwaer, one on the hair or back of the ear is all that any woman should ever use.

Meditations OF A Married Woman

BY HELEN ROWLAND

MY Daughter, WHEN is a woman most charming in the eyes of men?

Behold, she is most desirable to any man, when she exerteth her endeavors to be charming!

When she is cheerful at his coming, and not cast down at his going. When she exerteth not herself to entertain him, nor to impress him, and seeketh not to emmare him.

When she ceaseth to doll up for his delight, and taketh no heed concerning whether her nose be powdered nor her lips be reddened, nor her locks marcelled, at the sound of his approach.

When she ceaseth to harken for his ring upon the telephone, and neglecteth to reproach him for forgetting his promises.

When his presence no longer thrilleth her, and she noteth not his absence, nor his stayings away.

When she ceaseth to consult his tastes or to ask his opinions concerning her ways of her new hats or her friends.

When she receiveth hi approval with a smile of acquiescence—and his disapproval with a shrug of indifference.

When she no longer heth awake, wondering whose lips he may be kissing or into whose eyes he may be gazing.

When she doeth no "stunts" to arouse his jealousy and stageth no "scenes" to pique his interest.

When she ceaseth to worry over him, to cater to him, to keep tabs on him an dto dream of him!

For lo, as a woman hangeth ornaments of silver and gold upon a Christmas tree, so doth she drape her illusions upon a man.

And not until these have fallen away, doth she see any man as he IS, and treat him as a human being.

Not until the stardust fallen from her eyes, doth she perceive that a man prefereth common sense to incense, and comradeship to worship.

Therefore, is a woman always most desirable in a man's eyes, when she ceaseth to ADORE him, and beginneth to ENDURE him!

For then is she filled with naturalness and good humor and glorified with a mantle of sweet indifference.

Verily, verily, all that a man requireth of any woman is that she amuse him a little and let him ALONE!

'The Understanding Heart'

A Story of the California Forests

PETER B. KYNE

(Copyright, 1928, Peter B. Kyne by arrangement with King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

CHAPTER 41

MONICA'S recital had imbued her with a more forcible realization of loss, and her tears flowed freely again. "Tell me, Tony," she sobbed, "tell me what to do."

"I can't, honey, but when I know what to do I'll do it for you. In the meantime, did your father give Uncle Charley a check for $5,000 when he was in that section?"

"Yes, Tony. My father distrusted people. He gave Uncle Charley $5,000 in advance. I remember the night they counted it out, spoonful after spoonful, on Uncle Charley's funny little scales. Uncle Charley had to be nasty, of course. He insisted on using his own scales. He said he had half a notion that father's scales were crooked. Of course he didn't mean it——"

"I understand, dear. He was just living up his reputation as the worst liar in these here mountings—the liar that nobody could trap. . . . I had hoped we might find a cancelled check to prove the payment—or, in the absence of your statement, you understand, courts usually require corroborative evidence.

"However, we have one more ace up the sleeve of our kimono. Undoubtedly Uncle Charley had a lawyer draw up a deed, and of course, the very worst kind of jack-leg lawyer would have informed him that his signature to the deed must be acknowledged before a notary public. Who was the lawyer?"

"They didn't have a lawyer. The mining company's superintendent—the one Bob Mason killed—told them it was a simple thing to fill in the legal description of the property on a printed form of deed. He had one in his office and filled it in on his typewriter. He told them laughingly he would save them a lawyer's fee. However, he received his fee—a two-gallon demijohn of Uncle Charley's oldest and best!"

"And that important witness is dead. Well, I'll have to interview every notary public in the county. You see, Monica, when a notary public attests the signature on any sworn document he makes a notation of the nature of the document. He is required by law to do that.

"We'll make another search for the deed, Monica, and if we cannot find it I'll sue Uncle Charley's estate for you, and what with your testimony and the notary's record we'll make out a pretty good case. Perhaps we'll win."

"I haven't any money for law-suits," Monica replied drearily. "Now that Uncle Charley has died intestate the public administrator will administer his estate, will he not?"

"Unless Uncle Charley's next of kin should apply for and be granted letters of administration."

"Uncle Charley had no next of kin."

Tony Garland loaded his pipe and smoked thoughtfully for several minutes. "Well, Monica, we have a bridge to cross, of course, but we'll cross it when we come to it. Meanwhile I'll think of something. Love laughs at locksmiths, you know."

"To be as poor and as alone in the world as I am, Tony; to have $150,000 almost in my hands and then to have it withdrawn—that's terribly hard, Tony."

"Oh, I'll get it back for you, dear. Truth, crushed to earth, will rise again."

Monica leaned her tired head on his broad young shoulder for a moment. "Oh, Tony," she murmured, "you're so masterful and comforting. I've never met a man like you before."

"Please God you never may," he replied, and she felt his lithe body shake with a little inward chuckle. In a moment, however, he was serious. "What will you do when you're a rich lady?" he queried.

Monica raised her head and looked at him wistfully. "My plans are very indefinite Tony. That is another bridge we'll cross when we come to it."

"But how about the immense, and contemptuous world—down yonder?"

She kissed him lightly on the cheek. "In the fanciful phraseology of the late Uncle Charley," she whispered in his ear, "to hell with that!"

"Oh, you're delicious!" he cried, and hugged her to him. "I love you so much my heart hurts. And it isn't pantry love either, honey. The hurt started the day before yesterday."

"A man in a kitchen is a pathetic figure, Tony. Do run out and milk the goat."

"I think I ought to wash Pansy's udder carefully and let the young fellow rustle for himself," he suggested, with the odd, whimsical leer she found so tremendously amusing. "He's bound to feel more at home. Romulus and Remus were suckled by a she-wolf, you know, and Pansy's a sweet and gentle little creature. I'm certain she will not object."

"You're bound to experiment, aren't you?"

With a light laugh he poured some hot water in a pan, helped himself to soap and a towel and departed for the barn, where presently Monica heard him, singing a rollicking song of his soldier days.

"Oh, the dirty little adjutant's the worst one of them all,
He has you on the parade-ground to answer every call,
And if you are not steady at dress parade or drill,
Oh, it's 'Sergeant, do your duty
Shove that rookie in the mill!'"

"He reminds me of a little overgrown boy," thought the girl happily. "He's so kind and thoughtful. I think he's a good man, too."

Had she been in a mood somewhat more philosophical she would have realized that men whose lives are lived as close to the earth as was Tony Garland's are, quite generally, simple, kind and wholly understanding creatures. It is the competition of civilized life that destroys the thing God made in His own image and likeness!

And Tony Garland, whimsical, humorous young rascal that he was, had his way with Pansy and the baby. He had the amiable Pansy in the living room with her head tied short to the leg of the table, and the baby held under her, gleaning sustenance from nature's fount, before Monica knew what he was doing. He called to her to come and see.

"An ounce of invention is worth a ton of horse power," he assured her with that grave solemnity that denotes the humorous country dweller. "The maternal spirit is strong in Pansy. She ought to have a family of her own——"

He commenced singing softly an improvised parody on "The Wearin' o' the Green."

"Oh, I once knew a nanny-goat and
Pansy was her name,
She had no children of her own, which really was a same,
But she met a brave young ranger
and I'll tell you what he did,
He supplied her with a baby and she thought it was a kid."

"Second verse!" Monica demanded, childishly delighted at his magnificent nonsense.

"And when at last to manhood's state that goat-raised child attained
A blind man at a glance could see how badly he'd been trained
For he'd eat tin cans and paper, all while wagging of his chin,
And he didn't have a single friend,
because he butted in!"

"Tony, you're a ridiculous boy!"

"Since you do not appreciate my minstrelsy, I'll not open my mouth again tonight."

"Oh, please do, Tony! Sing me the third verse. Please."

Garland resumed:

"Oh, he met a mountain maiden and unto her he said,
'I'd sure be delighted, miss, if me an'
you could wed,'
But the maiden turned a haughty face
and said, 'Go home to mater,
For I'll wed a forest-ranger! Thanks,
I do not crave a satyr.'"

He had succeeded at last in driving the blue devils off Bogus. "And then what?" Monica pleaded childishly.

He heaved a deep sigh. "You're just like any little girl. Once a fellow starts to tell you a fairy-tale he's irresistably lost. He must go on and on and on, over such a long way, until the hero comes at last to a little hut in the forest where the magician lives. The magician opens the door, in response to our hero's timid knock, and immediately says, 'Hocus, pocus, importatus, abra cadabra,' which, literally translated, means this child is fed and it is now time to milk Pansy and put her back in the barn. To the woodbox with this infant."

Love's Embers

A Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

Message from the Secret Service Agent

As the words "K. seven!" came simultaneously from the lips of my father, Lillian and Allen Drake, I realized that they just had made a discovery most astounding to them. It takes something most extraordinary to jolt the composure of anyone of the three agents of the diplomatic secret service but something in the appearance of the packet which I had brought them from the red-bearded man had upset their usual poise.

It was my father who realized first that their exclamation and their excitement were unintelligible to me. With his fingers already ripping the cover from the packet, he stopped and held it out to me.

"Look, dear, in the corner!" he said.

My eyes followed his pointing finger and saw a tiny but remarkably well executed sketch of a mongrel dog holding up one paw as if lame. The next second, Allen Drake's hand clasping a pencil, showed me where the characters "K. seven" were cleverly hidden in the lines depicting the hurt paw.

"K. seven" is one of the mysteries of our service," my father said. "He plays a lone hand, is not connected in any official way with us, and nobody has the slightest clue to his identity. But whenever anything threatening the government is on the tapis, sooner or later we receive a communication from 'K. seven,' which helps us infinitely. He evidently has a wide and intimate knowledge of the cunning, devilish criminals whose menace is known by every government in the world. We of the service are rooting out one nest of them after another, but it seems an endless task. Sometimes I feel as if new groups of them are springing up faster than we can destroy the old ones."

"You know better than that, Chief," Lillian said briskly. "You are all worn out, that's the only trouble. Let's see what 'K. seven' has to say. By the way, have you ever noticed that while he always picks a different animal or bird for his monogram, it's always a lame or hurt one?"

My father nodded and held the packet out to her.

"Will you read it aloud, my dear?" he asked, and Lillian took from the envelope two enclosures—one a typewritten paper, the other an envelope bearing an inscription which she read aloud.

"To be read after the typewritten statement, and then shown to the Princess Olina of Transvania, known as Elenor Lincoln, if it be necessary to convince her of the truth of the statements made in the typewritten paper."

"He evidently knows his [illegible]," Lillian continued, laying the [illegible] aside, and opening and [illegible] paper. "She was the one [illegible] kept talking to always, [illegible] already [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

100 Young People Representing Various Denominations Attend Organization Session; Prominent Churchmen on Program as Speakers

Organization of a Marion County Christian Endeavor Union was perfected at a meeting of about 100 young people of churches of all denominations in the county last night at First United Brethren Church. He will speak here in the Marion County Chautauqua program next summer.

Canto Club to Give Final Concert of Series Monday

Using largely the outstanding numbers of their programs of the last five years, members of the Canto Club will give their fifth anniversary concert Monday night at 8:30 o'clock in the Star Auditorium. The concert will also serve as the club's observance of National Music Week.

The program Monday night will conclude the club's concert series of three numbers for the year.

The concert will be put on entirely by club members with John F. Lacey, tenor, as soloist. Ernst C. Carl directs the organization, comprised of about 30 male voices. Mrs. Helen Zuck Lacey is the piano accompanist.

In its five years as a concert group the club has received much acclaim for its unusually fine vocal programs given in Marion and surrounding towns as well as in Columbus, where club members broadcast over WAIU two years ago. They were heard in concert two weeks ago at Mt. Gilead as a return engagement.

Single admission tickets for Monday's concert are fifty cents, or 75 with a reserved seat.

"BUD" ROBINSON TO PREACH IN MARION

Noted Minister on Program at Nazarene Church for Friday Night

Bud" Robinson of Pasadena, Cal., a product of the Tennessee mountains, is known, and reported to be one of the most unique preachers in the United States at the present time, will preach in a service Friday night at First Church of Nazarene, S. State-st, it was announced today by Rev. G. E. Wade, pastor.

Special music for the service, which promises to be one of the outstanding programs of the Nazarene Church this year, will be in charge of Professor I. C. Messer of Oklahoma City, who is accompanying the famous preacher on a tour through the Middle West.

Mr. Robinson has preached in every state in the union and in most of the provinces of Canada. He was born in the Tennessee mountains, in abject poverty, and was received there in a district where churches and schools were unknown. He later drifted to the cattle ranges of Texas and became a cowboy.

Here he was converted at the age of 20 who had never attended school and was unable to read or write. He learned to read by studying the New Testament after his day's work was done. Although handicapped by an impediment in his speech he was determined to respond to a call to the ministry and became, not long after, one of the outstanding ministers in the country.

Springtime in the Soul

A SERMONETTE

BY REV. J. A. CARRIKER

Pastor, Forest Lawn Presbyterian Church

ALL nature awakening from its winter sleep is coming into its own with a marvelous manifestation of new life. With the coming of springtime we move into a new world of abundant new life. Herein God not only proves His never ending goodness, but teaches the most tremendous truth about His plan for our own lives. He says that He wants us to come out of that old winter shell of sin and manifest a new life.

This new life in nature corresponds to the new birth in the soul. It is springtime in every soul who has had the experience of the new birth spoken of by Jesus to Nicodemus when he said, "Ye must be born again." Mark Hopkins said, "Nature is religious only as it manifests God." None of us question the fact that nature does manifest God. At the same time, nature in all her glory is only the background of the lives of men. And if we could understand the voice of nature she would put us to shame with a picture of our own cold, bleak, dead lives—barren of manifestations of God.

When there is springtime in nature and springtime in the lives of men then heaven rejoices and the heart of God is satisfied.

There is springtime in the soul when we are willing to face the fact of sin in our own lives; when we definitely accept Jesus and his death on the cross to take away sin; when we daily, conscientiously apply the teachings of His Gospel in our lives, as surely as we plant good seed in our gardens; and when we faithfully defend and support God's personally established institution (the church) for the advancement of His kingdom among men.

Marion Pastor Has Record of Being Absent from Duty Only Four Sundays in 22 Years

BY FRANCES JENNINGS

FROM the life of farm hand and country school teacher, Rev. H. E. Williamson, pastor of Oakland Evangelical Church, has risen to the profession of minister. Like many other Marion pastors he began life on a farm, received his education at a country school and spent several years as a teacher before receiving his call to the ministry.

"My ambition originally was to be a college professor," Reverend Williamson says, "and it was towards that end that I entered the teaching profession, one of many who in those days when qualifications were less exacting, chose teaching as a lifework."

Reverend Williamson was the oldest of a family of nine of which he was the only one to enter the ministry. Although he had become an active church member when 17 years of age, he was not converted until he was 20 years old and it was shortly after that, out of a clear sky, he received his call to the service of God.

Begins Work Early

The Oakland pastor was born in Lithopolis, a town famous for its foundation of stone, and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tunis T. Williamson. His father is living. He began working on a farm when he was 13 years old and with the small salary he received helped earn his way through school.

After graduating from the Lithopolis High School he left for Ada, where he studied for two terms at the Normal School of Ohio Northern University. He then taught a district school in Fairfield County for three years.

In 1901 and at the age of 21, Reverend Williamson was licensed a preacher by the Ohio Conference of the Evangelical Church. He began preaching in 1902 at Wilmont as pastor of the Evangelical Church on a salary of $250 a year. He served there for two years, as pastor of the Wayne

REV. H. E. WILLIAMSON

County Evangelical Circuit the next three, one year in Redkan and two at Greensburg.

Enrolls at University

At the end of that time and with eight years' preaching experience Reverend Williamson enrolled at Taylor University, remaining there two years. He completed his education at the Evangelical Theological Seminary in Naperville, Ill., graduating in the summer of 1914.

Upon graduation he went to Butler, where he served as an Evangelical pastor for three years, and from there to Lindsey, where he remained for seven years. After two years at Baltimore he accepted a call to Oakland Evangelical Church and came to Marion in September, 1920.

In his 22 years as a minister, Reverend Williamson has been absent from his duties only four Sundays, those in a consecutive period when he was ill of smallpox several years ago. He became a deacon of the Evangelical Church at the Conference in Akron in 1903 and an elder at Bucyrus in 1908.

Reverend Williamson has no hobbies, he asserts, but, next to his work as a minister, his chief interest is in evangelism. During his schooldays he conducted and at the present time still directs numerous revivals.

Other Activities

Reverend Williamson's ministerial duties include his work as vice president of the Ohio State Camp Meeting Association located at Mt. Vernon, a position he has held for six years, and his activities in the Marion County Ministerial Association as chairman of the committee on law enforcement and morals.

Mrs. Williamson, who is Reverend Williamson's second wife and who was formerly Miss Lulu M. Witherup of Akron, is almost as active a churchwoman as Reverend Williamson is churchman. In spite of her duties as the head of a household of three daughters, she is president of the Woman's Missionary Society of the church and teaches two Bible classes, one in Sunday School, the other known as the "Adult League" which meets in the evening. The "Williamson girls" are Misses Miriam and Marie Williamson, juniors in Harding High School, and little Miss Marjorie Williamson, a pupil of the first grade.

Since coming here in the fall of 1920 Reverend Williamson has received 98 new members into Oakland Church. During his ministry he has officiated at 155 funerals, 53 weddings and performed 105 baptisms.

REV. W. R. SHIVELY

Rev. W. R. Shively, for two years pastor of First Church of Brethren, has announced his intention of concluding his duties here June 1. His resignation as pastor, recently tendered the congregation, has been accepted.

Reverend Shively, with his wife and daughter, will leave June 1 for Los Angeles, where they will attend the World Sunday School Conference. They expect to make their home in the West, although Reverend Shively's plans for the future are tentative.

Reverend Shively expects, next winter or later on, to complete his last year of seminary work, unfinished when he was called to the local pastorate. He will then go on with his career.

Succeeding Rev. Ralph R. Hatton, now of Toledo, Reverend Shively came here in 1920 after attending Bethany Theological Seminary in Chicago.

The Mission Board of the Northeastern Ohio district of the Church of Brethren will have charge of the obtaining of another pastor for the Marion Church.

Eight Teams Will Open Recreation Season Monday

PENNANT BATTLE TO BE HARDER FOUGHT IN CHURCH LEAGUES

Games Will Be Played at Central, Fairfield, Silk Mill and Lincoln

By KARL R. McELROY
Sports Editor, The Star

Marion's recreational ball season will officially open on four local diamonds Monday night when eight teams of Sunday School League No. 2 start their annual battle for the pennant.

The battle for the flag this year in the Sunday school loops will be even harder fought that last season. Every manager is reporting a stronger team than appeared for the opening frag in '27.

Calvary on strength of their preseason record, will have tougher opposition this season than ever before. Last night the champs defeated Huber, 17 to 3, in a six inning game.

But four fields will be used by the two Sunday School Leagues. These are Fairfield, Lincoln, Central and Silk Mills. The junior league will play on Monday nights and the seniors on Tuesday.

Games Monday night are slated to get under way at 6:15 o'clock with the following schedule to be played: Lee Street Forest Lawn at Central; Presbyterian No. 2 Epworth Juniors at Lincoln; Christian No. 2 Reformed at Silk Mills; Lutheran-United Brethren at Fairfield.

Teams composing the industrial and Commercial leagues will probably be reformed of their schedules next week. At the present time efforts of the baseball commission to locate another team has proven fruitless.

At the present time 33 teames are enrolled in the four leagues. Efforts have been made during the past week to secure another team to make an even number.

People who have advice to give are never stingy with it.

AMERICAN GOLFERS HOLD LONG END OF ODDS WITH BRITISH

Failure of Hagen Against Compston Gives English Heart in Open

New York, May 5. Evidently, with Walter Hagen stopping that Compston wallop full on the completion, the British have decided that the eagles scream this time is only a jolly old bleat of distress. Anyhow, the British Open Golf Championship will begin at Sandwich on Monday and, for the first time since 1925, an American golfer is not the ranking favorite on the betting.

The American invaders — Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Tommy Armour, Leo Diegel, Larry Nabholtz and Bill Mehlhorn are representative of preceding operations that brought back the title in 1921, 1922, 1924 1925, 1926 and 1927. Yet the British have undergone a freaking alteration of viewpoint since Hagen, the American bellwether, thrust that arrogant chin of his out to take, receive, accept and otherwise become host to that 18 and 17 defeat at Moor Park last week. No longer do the British look forward to one of those "glorious defeats" or "moral victories." They have tasted American blood for the first time during this post-war era and have found it rather palatable.

British Give Odds

In consequence, we have been regaled with stories to the effect that Compston and Abe Mitchell have been held resisting chances for the open at odds of 7 to 5. Now you tell one and I must that it be one of your best. No golfer—not even the great Jones himself—is worth more than four or five to one in any given championship.

The British figure these things no closer than a handicap. They do so, first, because they are British and, second, because they have to handle a tremendous play on any sport event and naturally they can't afford to find some stranger's hand completely surrounded by their pockets. They wouldn't give 7 to 5 that the king can speak English.

Hagen Has Effect

Therefore, if their form sheets show Compston and Mitchell in the short odds and the Americans back among the nominal choices, it only means that the Hagen debacle has had its effect and that the money is going in on Archie and Abe. It might do worse, at that.

Compston shot 67, 68 and 70 in the Moor Park match and if he could play the open within 15 strokes of that pace, he would be "in" like the one-ball in the side pocket. Compston proved he was hot in that match and so nobody would be justified in betting that he has cooled out in the meantime. Mitchell is a sound but because he is overdue for a major title and Sandwich is a course that demands length and accuracy. Abraham is presumed to have both.

HINKLIN IS HEAD OF MASONIC BALL LOOP

Locals Hold First Practice at Lincoln Park; Season Opens May 23

With nearly 30 players reporting for the first practice session at Lincoln Park last night, the Marion Masonic team is rapidly rounding into shape for the opening of the inter-city Masonic League battle on May 23.

Marion Hinklin, manager of the local team, has been named president of the league with teams entered from Bucyrus, Upper Sandusky and Crestline.

Marion will open its season at Bucyrus on Wednesday, May 23, with Upper Sandusky playing at Crestline. The home season will start for the local team on May 30. The completed schedule has not been arranged.

EIGHT TEAM LEAGUE FORMED IN BUCYRUS

Tennis Courts Being Conditioned; Work Started on Harmon Field Improvements

Bucyrus, May 5—Signs of spring have been showing in Bucyrus. The Baker Avenue tennis courts are being put into shape for this season together with private courts. The local Harmon playground tennis courts will soon be leveled off and rolled down to make a fine level net court for this summer's play. The kitten ball diamond already shows marks of use this season and soon games will be played there every night.

Excavation has been begun for the wading pool which will be installed at the Harmon field.

Don Mathew of this city, president of the Tri County Baseball League for this season, announced an eight team league. The teams will play a 14-game series on a "home and away" schedule playing each team at home and away. Play will be for Spalding trophy to be awarded through the Matthew Store. The season schedule will be divided into two sections, the first section play ending June 24, and the last section of play beginning on July 8, with all games being played on Sunday. The best game of the season will be between Benton and Holmes-Liberty and will be played at Secenium park Sunday.

The New York Central Baseball team has been training this season on the Lane Street Field in preparation for their first game which is to be played at Columbus today.

Which a man can like dis-agrees with you, don't try to recommend your views to him.

HEIR PRESUMPTIVE TO RUTH'S CROWN

Lou Gehrig will be remembered for giving Babe Ruth the run of his life for home run honors in 1927. This ten-second movie of Lou shows him in his second season in the big league, with a batting average of over .300 and again running neck and neck with the big "Babe."

Toomire To Be Farmed

Well Known Antioch Star Will Report in June

Willis K. Toomire, better known as Bill around Marion where he has pitched recreation ball for several seasons, will be farmed out by the St. Louis Cardinals after June 23 according to information received here.

Toomire will probably be sent to a club in the South Atlantic league for training in the manly art of catching before given a shot as a regular by the Cards.

Bill, who is a resident of Urbana, has played for three years on the Antioch varsity nine. Most of his experience has been behind the plate but he has shown up well at third and on the mound.

Although his contract calls for him to report before July 1, Toomire will probably start work immediately after commencement exercises on June 22.

LACOSTE DEVELOPS TENNIS CANNONBALL

Gun Is Used To Imitate Terrific Drive of Bill Tilden

Paris, May 5—The famous 'cannon ball' service of Bill Tilden has been made a reality by his French rival Rene Lacoste.

Lacoste has invented a cannon from which the tennis ball is shot over the net. Whether Rene's invention is the son of necessity could not be learned but tennis experts here have always deplored the fact that none of the French aces served fast enough to give each other the proper training.

At least the training afforded was not the brand of hot service doled out by Big Bill. It—therefore thought that Lacoste, out of dire necessity for practice on very fast serving, turned his mind to the cannon.

The new invention consists of a steel tube about 15 inches long attached to a revolving stand which in turn is fastened to a movable platform.

The steel tube contains the ball. A powerful spring is wound up with a crank behind the ball. The tube is then raised to the height of the average player's racquet and pointed toward the opposite court.

The platform is placed on the baseline. The spring is released and the ball is "shot" with lightning speed onto the other court.

The speed of the "serve" may be regulated by the spring. An ace service may be obtained or even a serve harder than any human being could possibly send over the net is within the machine's power.

Lacoste has high hopes for his new invention. He states that a coach can stand off at the side and watch his pupil execute a speedy serve when in the past the coach was generally doing the serving himself.

Rene hopes to improve on this his first model so that a number of balls may be contained in the steel tube and be shot out at its "opponent" at regular or irregular times.

ATTA BOY, BABE

Ruth Pattens Batting Average; Gets Sixth Homer

NEW YORK May 5 After a poor start, Babe Ruth today boosts the respected batting average of .357 in four times at bat against the White Sox yesterday he got four hits including his sixth homer of the season. Joe Hauser of the Athletics, who has replaced Lou Gehrig as the Babes home run rival, also got one and now has two homers.

Racer Noted For Mishaps

Cooper Drops Many Races as Result of Smashups on Track

Ralph DePalma became the best known racing star because of his consistent bad luck.

But Earl Cooper silent veteran, who is captain of the Marmon racing team which will compete in the International 500-mile race to be held at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30 has had his share of important mishaps attached on with his string of successes.

Cooper with a patience that would have made Job thank his lucky beauty marks has borne in silence a series of calamities that were obscured in his triumph.

Sitting on a work bench in the Marmon garage at the track where the team of Marmon Specials are being prepared for the coming speed test Cooper with a smile on his speed lined face detailed a few important mishaps in his career.

First Start Bad

In 1914 he was whirling away in his first start at Indianapolis. After sweeping his car into second place bending the heavy juggernaut around the treacherous corners for many a gruelling lap Cooper drove into the pits for a change of fuel and a relief driver. The relief driver with instructions to hold pace for Cooper, while Cooper rested in preparation for a winning dash at the finish, skidded and hurled the car on a fence. Cooper miraculously escaped injury.

In 1923 practically the same thing happened. While along in good pace with the car working nicely Cooper who began racing in 1903 with Barney Oldfield as competition and who is directing the Marmon's return to racing after seventeen years' absence from the track turned his car over to Tom Alley, relief driver. Alley ran it out of number three turn a bit too quickly and skated through a fence. It was the finish of Cooper's chances although he then drove relief for Eddie Hearne, finishing the car in fourth place.

The following year with only four laps to go, Cooper was out in front with a comfortable margin but being chased vigorously by the late Joe Boyer, one of the most spectacular speeders in history. His rubber was thinning, but Cooper took the outside chance and continued. A shoe blew and while Cooper was changing Boyer went into the lead and won the race. Cooper came home second.

When rain temporarily halted the race in 1926, Cooper was in third place and coming through the field in fine style. When the race was resumed after a rain storm the gears in his car wouldn't work and he had to abandon the contest.

In a 500-mile race at Corona in 1915 Cooper was leading Eddie Pullen and with 11 miles to go and a new world's record in his grasp the camshaft gear in Cooper's car broke and he had to give up the race.

"But they don't pay for being close," said the silent philosopher of the Marmon racing combination, "and racing is one sport in which an alibi is of no value."

Boston Gets Tribe Scalp

Sunrise Clubs Chalk Up Six Victories at Start

New York May 5—The east has the edge on the west in major league baseball's intersectional battle, having won all of the first six games played. Pittsburg beat Boston yesterday, but the Braves took the first game of the series the day before.

The latest upset was the 3 to 2 victory of the lowly Boston Red Sox over Cleveland. Danny MacFayden, ex-pitcher, young Boston hurler got the nod over Willis Hudlin. The Sox now have a winning streak of two games and have subjected the American League collar to Chicago.

Missing their pitchers for the first time this season the sluggers showed a marked liking for their offerings and batted out 148 hits for a combined batting average of .347. Pittsburgh led the league with 21 hits and the New York Giants were second with 20.

Babe Hits Ten

Babe Ruth and Joe Dugan of the Yankees, Pat Crouse and Adam Comorsky of the Pirates and Paul Lusteroth of the Tigers had a perfect day at bat. The colleging Waner brothers got seven hits between them. Ruth slammed out his sixth homer and Joe Hauser got his fifth.

The long-legging Giants chalked up their fifth straight victory outslugging Cincinnati 11 to 7. The Reds dropped to third place.

The Pirates made short work of Kent Greenfield their nemesis last year, and swamped the Braves by a 13 to 3 count.

Pennock Takes Fifth

Hauser, Hale and Cox hit for the circuit as the Athletics trounced Detroit, 10 to 5. With a one run lead, Lefty Grove rose up at the finish.

Herb Pennock, Yankee southpaw, turned in his fifth straight victory of the season in subduing the Chicago White Sox, 10 to 4. Joe Dugan's home in the first inning with the bases loaded practically ruined Al Thomas. Although accounted one of the league's best pitchers Thomas has never beaten the Yanks.

Five St. Louis pitchers were carted off the field at Washington as Senators rolled up a 13 to 6 margin over the Browns.

The St. Louis Brooklyn Chicago and Philadelphia National League clubs were held idle by rain.

BORN BROS. PROVE MERIT OF BRICK HOMES

Examples of New Dwellings Built in Marion

THE brick dwellings pictured above, built by Born Bros., are typical of the class of construction work being done by that firm. Material used in these houses, as well as practically all others built by Born Bros., has been supplied by C. W. Leffler & Son, N. High st. The houses pictured here are located as follows: (Upper left), south side of Mt. Vernon-av near Vernon Heights; (upper right) east side of Forest-st, second house south of Mt. Vernon-av; (lower left), King av, Elm Heights addition; (lower right), west side of Forest st, second house south of Mt. Vernon.

To Born Bros. is due no small credit as pioneers in acquainting the home-building public of Marion with the advantage of brick construction in medium-priced houses.

Last year they built and disposed of a number of brick homes and this year are entering upon a more extensive program.

Everywhere brick, as a material for home construction, is rapidly being endorsed and used for foresighted individuals and building contractors.

The reasons for this are many and obvious. Home construction involves appearance, permanence, economy, safety and market value.

Brick manufacturers are catering to public taste in colorings and almost as wide choice is now offered as in automobiles and clothing. Many beautiful effects may be obtained by combining harmonizing colors in endless designs.

Permanency Unquestioned

Permanency hardly needs be mentioned, so many examples are presented from ancient times down to the present.

Economy may be emphasized by saying that the upkeep of a brick home is practically nothing at all except painting of parts where wood may be used in conjunction.

As for the original cost, recent investigations conducted by the Ohio Brick & Tile Association in Cleveland and other cities have definitely established the fact that many contractors are able to build small brick homes at the same cost as frame.

Again, brick homes are cooler in summer and easier to heat in winter, thus saving fuel. Not being inflammable, there is less danger of fire, a fact recognized by insurance underwriters, who charge lower premium rates.

In some of the brick homes illustrated on this page, designed and constructed by Born Bros. from materials obtained from C. W. Leffler & Son many other details of economy, permanence and safety are incorporated.

Starting from the ground up, no detail is slighted. The foundations are of paving brick, laid in Kosmortar, a cement product. Above the foundation are face brick with hollow tile "back up" and rock lath are used in all of them to eliminate, as far as possible, all plaster check and lath buckles. These fireproof materials, combined with asbestos shingles, make a home which will last indefinitely.

These homes are open for inspection and Born Bros. stand ready at any time to give estimates on duplicates of them or on plans submitted by customers.

ACCURATE APPRAISAL WORK DONE IN OHIO

Realtors Performing Valuable Service; Marion Total Listed at $252,000

Columbus, May 5—Real Estate Boards of Ohio during 1927 appraised property amounting to $31,551,076,69 according to reports just received by Ray Hofford, secretary of the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards. This is a significant fact because a few years ago the total would have been only a small fraction of the one above.

Ohio real estate boards are taking a concerted stand against Realtors giving out "guess appraisals" to their clients. Many times a snap judgment appraisal, given out as a favor without a thorough inspection and appraisal of the property will be quoted and passed about promiscuously. If the guess happens to be considerably out of line it will reflect not only upon the knowledge and judgment of that broker, but indirectly, upon the whole profession.

Practically every real estate board in the state has developed an efficient appraisal service through which a property owner can get authoritative valuations made. Such appraisals are made according to the most scientific methods and represent authentic information rather than comparisons and guesses.

The amount of property appraised by the various real estate boards of the state is reported as follows: Akron, $1,161,215,42; Canton, $827,250,38; Cincinnati, $2,084,253,15; Cleveland, $8,039,206,91; Columbus, $1,000,000; Dayton, $1,000,025,00; Findlay, $10,-000; Hamilton, $20,000; Lima, $1,-867,700; Lorain, $41,800; Marion, $252,000; Massillon, $6,500; Portsmouth, $300,000; Springfield, $150,000; Toledo, $3,327,00; Warren, $200,000.

80,000 CUSTOMERS ADDED TO OHIO LIST

Electric Light and Power Companies Report Big Increase in Year

Electric service was extended to almost 80,000 new customers in Ohio during last year, according to the compilation of the annual reports of the electric light and power companies, which have been filed with the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

The exact number of new customers added was 79,535, making the total number of customers served in this state 1,249,881.

The figures show that in order to extend and improve service it was necessary for the industry to increase its investment by several million dollars, bringing in Ohio up to the figure of $418,623,291.17.

Taxes and operating expenses also increased during the year. Taxes totaled $11,129,012 and operating expenses amounted to $57,240,827.39.

An increase in the number of kilowatt hours distributed within the state was recorded, this increase being more than 10 per cent. The total so given by the figures on file with the utilities commission was 4,747,150,861 kilowatt hours.

The number of companies operating last year was 137, a decrease of five companies from the year before.

DONE IN HALF DAY

Housing Survey at Columbus Completed in One Afternoon

Columbus, May 5—Surveying the entire city in one afternoon is the record recently made by the Columbus Real Estate Board. A noon luncheon was held at which the blanks were passed out and territory assigned. By evening all reports were received. Assistance was given by students of Real Estate classes of Ohio State University in the collection of the data, which will be tabulated and summarized under the direction of Prof. H. E. Hoagland. The survey when complete will show the number of homes in the city, amount of construction under way, condition of vacant property and other facts pertaining to real estate and property conditions in the city.

Many a man who is the big noise in the office is only a little squeak at home.

FRUITS LIVEN UP MARION MARKETS

Warmer Weather Add to Display of Delicacies in Last Week

With the approach of warmer weather produce markets here have taken on a livelier attitude. Strawberries, cantaloupes and various kinds of California and South American fruits arrived on the market during the last week to revive the jaded appetite. None of the delicacies appeared in great quantities, however, and with the exception of strawberries, which have been on the market for more than a month were out of reach of the average pocketbook.

Cantaloupes of only ordinary quality sold at 25 and 30 cents each while California cherries were being offered at 50 cents a pound. Strawberries, however, showed little change from the prices of a week ago. Good quality berries were scarce, due to flooded condition of the strawberry fields of the south, and sold as high as 50 cents a quart. The larger part of the supply, however, was of a poorer quality and sold at 20 and 35 cents.

Vegetable markets showed but little change from the preceding week. New potatoes are becoming more plentiful. Small Florida varieties sold during the week at three pounds for 25 cents while larger varieties sold at two pounds for 25 cents. Old potato prices were steady, good quality stock selling all week at from 40 to 50 cents a peck.

Hothouse tomatoes selling at 25 cents a pound throughout the entire season dropped to 25 cents a pound yesterday. New cabbage was advanced to 15 cents a pound during the week, the peak price of the year. The quality is unusually good however.

Industrial, Rail Stocks Move in Narrow Price Margins

OILS MOSTLY IN SPECULATION

General Motors and American Can Co to New Price Levels

Markets at a Glance

Both security exchanges closed. Grains strong; cotton strong; rubber steady; foreign exchange steady.

BY W. S. COUSINS
International News Service

New York, May 5—Industrial and railroad stocks moved through comparatively narrow price margins in active trading this week.

The Reserve Bank at New York did not advance its rediscount rate as expected and the call loan rate returned to the 4½ per cent at the week-end, foreign completion of May 1 financing of interest and dividends. The New York Stock Exchange reported $267,000,000 in collateral loans during April and the reserve weekly compilation of brokers' loans showed an increase of $137,000,000.

Results of first quaterly operations of American industry and railroad corporations were reported quite fully for the benefit of the financial community. Falling off of railroad net was smaller than expected, and the motor car stocks retained their position as the best money-makers in the industrial list. Business conditions were reported as "spotty" by the commercial agencies, for which unseasonable weather was held largely responsible. Heavy speculation continued in the grain markets with wheat advancing violently in the first part of the week, only to slump off on weather news in the latter sessions.

Oils Draw Spotlight

The popular Standard Oil stocks drew most of the speculative spotlight of the week. Buying of the shares of the Standard Oils of New York and New Jersey by individual investors and investment trusts accounted for the unusual market activity in these stocks and the rise in prices to the highest levels since 1923. Curtailment of crude oil production, an increase in gasoline consumption, stiffling off refined oil prices, and reorganization of their strong technical positions, were the principal factors in the movement in oil stocks.

A burst of speculative business greeted the announcement that no change had been made in the New York Bank had retained the four per cent rediscount rate.

General motors and American Can raised up to new high price levels, the former pushing to above $200 a share for the first time in its present form.

Rails Active

The rails continued active, though a flimsy foundation appeared to have been built around the advance in the chap rails with reputed consolidation possibilities. Among the investment rails, New York Central, Frisco and Southern Railway moved very impressively with buying reported from the "best sources." Important new alignments in railroad properties, mostly in the eastern territory, particularly Wabash and Lehigh Valley were reported.

Chrysler and Studebaker motors responded with higher prices to the official announcements of the increase in earnings in the first quarter, with the gratifying increase in incoming orders.

Call loans returned to five per cent rate on Friday.

75 IS DAY'S HIGH FOR LOCAL COMPANY'S STOCK

Marion Steam Shovel Co. common stock went to a high mark of 75 on the New York curb yesterday. The low for the day was 73, that being the closing quotation. This was the figure at which the stock closed on the preceding day. Sales for the day were reported at 600 shares.

Huber Manufacturing Co. common was quoted on the Columbus market at 130 bid and 160 asked. Huber preferred quotations were 102 bid and 108 asked.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S MARKET

Chicago, May 5—Wheat furnished the trade with a twister yesterday that strained to the breaking point nerves already frazzled by its erratic by-halts since Monday. Early in the session it went down without a parachute for more than 4 cents, struck rock bottom and started to climb back up. At the close it was only 1-2c lower to 3-4c higher than the day before, according to the Herald and Examiner.

Corn was erratic, but that market showed such surprising strength in the face of the weakness in wheat that to sell it, no mater how it nets temporarily, seems dangerous. The July future never broke more than ¼ under the close on Thursday.

At the end corn ranged from 3-8@½c higher; oats were ¼@3-8c better; rye was up 1¾@2¼.

All the grains looked at the finish as if they would respond sharply with higher prices today on any decided influx of buying.

The government report is due next Tuesday. It is partly certain to confirm the average estimate of the private crop reporters concerning the damage that has been done to wheat. It is not unlikely to estimate the injury as considerably greater than that average.

This likelihood is generally realized. With such a prospect ahead few thoughtful traders will care to be short wheat at the time the report is due.

The action of the corn market yesterday was the best in many a day. Although erratic, its seesawing went on well above the low for the session. Any stimulating news might make it very strong. After the close the tip was out to buy corn.

BRITISH NON-SMOKERS LAUNCH SERVANT ATTACK

London—National Society of Non-Smokers which includes on its committee Sir John Martin Harvey, famous actor, Dr. Alfred Salter, M. P. and Dr. Marie Stopes, makes an attack in its annual report upon Government servants who smoke during their working hours.

"There are welcome signs in various quarters that attention is at last being given to the evils consequent on the permission of smoking during business hours.

"Not only is it a form of indiscipline, but it is a discourtesy to clients and customers which cannot be too strongly depreciated. Government servants are amongst the worst offenders."

"King of Logarithms" Still Able To Hold Own With All Mechanical Calculators

NEW YORK, May 5 — Samuel Isaac Krieger, the "King of Logarithms," demonstrated today that man may still hold up his head even in this age of machines.

Krieger, who has just arrived from Germany and is visiting a cousin in Brooklyn, showed that he is faster doing mathematics with a stub of a pencil than are those patent calculating machines.

"Multiply 3,1416 by 365," he was told while another young man started to do it on the machine.

Krieger's pencil executed a few quick maneuvers.

In five seconds he had the answer on his pad: 1146.3808.

Presently the machine confirmed the correctness of his lightning calculation.

"How old are you?" he asked a newspaper man.

"Thirty-three."

Krieger's pencil slashed through the air and in a few seconds he read from the pad:

"You have lived 1,040,688,000 seconds."

"Square this number," said a voice: "1844674407370955161G."

The pencil flew across the pad. Presto in the wink of an eye he had written: "Result, 340,282,366,920,938,463,463,374,607, 431,768,211,456."

A faint cry rose from the youth operating the calculating machine. He had run off the keyboard.

957 OUT OF EACH 1,000 CALL DOCTOR

And, That Is Annual Occurrence, Health Service Declares

Washington, May 5—In the typical American community an average of 957 out of every 1,000 people suffer illness of some sort every year, the United States Public Health Service declares.

Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming has recently completed a report on a two-year study of illness and diseases in a selected small city in the East.

The healthiest period in human life, the conclusion reveal, is the decade between 15 and 24 years of age. After 25, both the incidence of illness and the percentage of fatalities increase constantly with advancing age. The highest frequence of illness in the entire span of life is between the ages of 6 and 10 years ,but here the ratio of fatalities is extremely low.

Many Have Colds

Almost half of all the tabulated cases in the selected community are classified as "colds and bronchitis." Into this category fell 418.6 cases annually for every 1,000 population.

Other classification, with the ration per thousand:

Influenza and grippe	142.2
Digestive system	96.5
Tonsilitis	65.7
Puerperal causes	46.9
Nervous Disorders	44.1
Accidents	39.5
Measles	34.2
Whooping cough	22.6
Rheumatism; sumbago	21.8
Heart diseases	18.3
Hay fever, asthma	5.8

Approximately 40 per cent of all illnesses were found not only temporarily disabling but caused confinement to bed. Eighty per cent persisted three days or longer and sixty per cent eight days or longer. Less than five per cent were of one day or less duration.

"Illness was far more frequent under 10 years than at any other time of life," the Public Health summary says. "The average individual is most free from illness in the age period 15 to 24 years. Thereafter sickness becomes more frequent, more severe and more frequently fatal as age advances."

Plagues Diminish

Paradoxically, those infirmities, which cause the most illness, cause the fewest deaths. Respiratory diseases and disorders account for 60 per cent of the illness, but only 2 per cent of the deaths, whereas diseases of the heart and circulatory system, which cause only 2 per cent of the total community illness are responsible for 21 per cent of the deaths.

"Public health has as yet barely touched the task of preventing the conditions which manifest themselves in physical and mental impairments, in inefficiency, and illness in and postponable death," the report concludes.

"Plague and pestilences have been diminished, infant and child mortality from infectious and intestinal disorders are conquered and healthful living is being established more and more firmly as a popular ideal, but aside from these the prevention of diseases remains the outstanding problem yet to be solved."

YALE FORESTRY SCHOOL MOVES TO EAST LYNNE

East Lynne, Conn.—This New England village, where generations of painters have worked through long, lazy summer days, is now booked to succeed Milford, Pa., as the permanent summer home of Yale Forestry School.

After a trial of 2,000 acres of land centered about a large lake, Yale authorities have decided to move the Milford plant here, and are preparing to open the summer session, this year, on July 9.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS TO STUDY POLAR REGIONS

London—The fate of the 10,000 or 12,000 whales believed still to exist, mostly in the Antarctic Ocean, may be largely determined by a sub-committee of the League of Nations now sitting in Geneva.

Consisting of four members, the sub-committee is examining possible means for the preservation of sea fauna. Great Britain, Norway and other powers having interests in the whaling industry are not in favor of having regulations by international agreement, but the proposal to preserve the whale is supported by 21 members of the League.

The urgent need for protection of the whale has often been emphasized. The modern whaler, with its numerous up-to-date methods, has brought the whaling trade to what amounts almost to "wholesale butchery," in the words of one of the members of the committee.

ENGLISH LEADERS FIGHT AGAINST BIRTH CONTROL

London—Recruiting a mass membership including all the young married couples throughout the country is the aim of a new and vigorous campaign against birth control launched here.

The League of National Life, which has several members of Parliament, doctors and clergymen on its executive committee, is the prime mover in the campaign.

It is intended to combat the theory and practice of birth control by holding lectures, by distributing literature and by personally advising young married couples.

Among the leaders of the movement are Bishop Gore, Viscount Wolmer, Dr. Joseph Hertz, the Chief Rabbi, and leading figures in the political and religious life of the country.

If a man is right he doesn't have to get mad about it.

THREE KILLED WHEN AIRPLANE CRASHES

Stunt Flying Blamed for Tragedy at Dayton; Wives See Accident

Dayton, May 5—Three persons are dead today as the result of stunt flying in a light passenger airplane when it collapsed 1,500 feet in the air and crashed to the ground last night.

Those killed were Harold J. Forshay, U. S. Army Reserve pilot; Walter Clark, and Blair Cress, all of Dayton.

Forshay, considered an expert aviator, borrowed the small passenger plane of A. E. Johnson to give his two friends a ride. At a high altitude, Forshay began to do stunts while a crowd of several hundred looked on. One wing of the plane broke free from the fuselage at 1,500 feet after a steep dive and the ship crashed to the ground barely missing another plane that had just taken off.

The wives of Forshay's two passengers witnessed the crash and collapsed. Both were removed to a hospital.

"The plane was not built for stunting," Johnson, owner of the plane said. He attributed the accident to Forshay's aerial stunts.

PLANE FRANKENSTEIN

Inventor Killed When Ship Suddenly Crashes to Ground

Curtiss Field, N. Y., May 5—What caused the ill-fated airplane "Bonney Gull" to crash here late yesterday, resulting in the death of its inventor, Leonard W. Bonney, probably never will be known.

Aeronautical engineers were not familiar with the operation of the unique plane, which was modeled after a living sea gull, and they were in the dark today as to the specific cause of the crash.

Bonney was taught to fly by Orville Wright in 1910 and was one of the pioneers of the air. A few minutes before the crash he appeared to have realized his dream of success, for the huge bird had flown gracefully for half a mile and the veteran aviator had jubilantly waved to the watchers below. Then the plane, never regarded as a machine of sound design by aeronautical engineers because it was so different from other flying machines, turned on its creator like the Frankenstein monster and fell to earth like a plummet.

Bonney was thrown 50 feet and died a few minutes after being taken to a hospital. His skull had been fractured, both legs and collar bone were broken and he was injured internally.

Bonney, who was 52 had been experimenting with the "Bonney Gull" for several months. Until yesterday, however, he had not succeeded in getting it more than 10 or 12 feet from the ground.

SPEEDY SERVICE

New Inventions Bring Marked Improvement in Phone Service

Adoption of several new inventions, along with many other improvements in telephone art, has remarkably speeded up telephone service during the past few years, says the Ohio Committee on Public Utility Information.

The average time required for a connection on an out-town call in 1920 was four minutes. This was reduced to two minutes in 1925, while it is 90 seconds today. As a matter of fact more than 80 per cent of the connections to out-of-town points are made so rapidly that the caller does not have to hang up the receiver after giving the number.

15 CANDIDATES ARE READY FOR INQUIRY

Committee Prepares To Open Hearings Monday: Will Visit Two Governors

Washington, May 5—With 15 presidential candidates waiting to take the witness stand, the Senate's presidential campaign fund committee prepared today to push its inquiry into primary campaign expenditures to a conclusion before the Republican gathering at Kansas City June 12.

The committee will open its hearings Monday and meet daily until all the presidential candidates, their managers and representatives are heard. The senatorial candidates will be heard first, it was announced.

The committee will decide today whether to go to Albany, N. Y., to hear Gov. Al Smith and to Annapolis, Md., to hear Gov. Albert C. Ritchie. There were indications the committee would undertake both trips in order not to interfere with the executive duties of the two governors. All other candidates will be heard in Washington.

The committee announced that all the senatorial candidates had replied favorably to the invitations to testify. Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover had not replied up until this morning but that no difficulty was anticipated in getting Hoover to take the stand.

The candidates will be questioned about their organizations, who has handled their campaign funds and what they know of expenditures in their behalf.

Probe of Sandusky River Sanitary Conditions Assured

TWO PETITIONS AT COLUMBUS

Signed by Electors of Bucyrus and Dallas Townships in Crawford County

Columbus, May 5—Two petitions signed by certified electors of Bucyrus and Dallas Townships in Crawford County asking that Director John E. Monger of the State Health Department conduct an investigation into sanitary conditions of the Sandusky River were on file at the State Health Department here today.

These petitions were filed May 1, it was said, but not made public until today following the ruling of Attorney General Edward C. Turner yesterday in which he overruled the contention of the Bucyrus city solicitor and other Bucyrus officials and decided that the resolution submitted to the State Health Department last September was legally filed. Bucyrus officials claimed the petition filed was not valid inasmuch as it was not signed by enough certified electors.

Promise Investigation

The filing of these two petitions, it is said, insures another investigation into the conditions of the river, even if the original petition would have been declared invalid.

Officials of the State Health Department have already ordered the construction of a sewage disposal plant at Bucyrus, but actual construction work has never begun as the case has remained undecided since the filing of the original petition last fall.

Another investigation of the case will be begun as soon as weather conditions permit, officials of the health department said this morning.

Pfeiffer was high point man for Kenton with 15 points, and Johnson, Haggard and Jones tied for second honors with eight points apiece. Warner, a new dash man uncovered by Coach Wesner Emery, showed well with two seconds for six points. T. Speker was the star entry from Shawnee with 11 points. Yoakam was second with five counters.

PLAYERS PRESENT SERIES OF PLAYS

Three One-Act Productions Entertain Large Audience at Galion High School

Galion, May 5—Three one-act plays beautifully staged and costumed, were presented by the Drama Workshop Players Thursday night at the auditorium of the Senior High School as the final production of an unusually successful season. The plays used were entirely different in character and offered a wide scope of acting for the participating members of the organization.

The first play given, especially chosen because of its appeal to children, was "Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil," a fantasy by Stuart Walker. The characters were chosen from fairy lore and the play completely captivated the juvenile members of the audience. Helen Spiggle played the leading juvenile role as Davie; Ava Swartz appeared as the queen; Carl Schalip was the prince; Franklin Craun, the ballad singer; Paul Randall, the blindman; Harriet Wisterman, the milkmaid and Arnold Meeker, the dreadful headsman. Introducing the play, J. George Wiener as the Prologue and Rufus Eckstein as the Device-Bearer, contributed much comedy to the play and Gerald Everly interpreted the mysterious voice in the audience. The characters were all in fancy costume made under the direction of Mrs. Robert Phipps.

Give "The Conflict"

"The Conflict," a drama by Carice Vallette McCauley, which was the second presentation of the program, is one of the heaviest plays ever attempted by the players and had exceptionally difficult roles. Ethel Tracht, Angeline Yochem and Gerald Heiby appeared in the play and Vaughn Volk a member of the junior class of Galion High School, assisted the club and played the juvenile part.

A better speech play, 'Sauce for the Goslings," a comedy by Elgine Warren, closed the entertainment. The story centers about two modern young people whose constant usage of slang is very annoying to their parents. The clever plan by which the parents and the grandmother show the children the crudity of their speech, forms the basis of the play. Grace Deibig, Elizabeth Bland, Marjorie Moderwell Gledhill, Robert Yochem, Glen Kerschner and Robert Phipps were the featured players in the closing play of the program.

P. T. A. Sponsors Project

The Parent Teachers Association of the West School, sponsored the production and four members of the group, Mrs. Roy Arter, Mrs. Walter Kanable, Helen Murphy and Maryon Helmar contributed musical numbers between the plays. Charles Coyle, Floyd Myers and Bill McFarquhar were stage managers and Paul Randall directed the production.

MT. VICTORY WINS

Swamps St. Anthony High of Kenton, 22 to 3

Kenton, May 5—A severe lacing was administered the St. Anthony School nine of Kenton Friday when it was defeated by the overwhelming score of 22 to 3 by Mt. Victory High on that town.

Absence of three regulars from the line-up handicapped the locals in their opening tilt, however, they were unable to fathom Boyd's offerings and chalked up only five hits for three runs in the first, third and fifth innings. One of these was a homer by Gelhaus.

Mt. Victory found Manlick, local hurler, early in the game and pounded him for 23 hits, McCullough, Brown and Creamer poling out homers. He was also touched for four triples. In the last frame Mt. Victory piled up a total of 10 tallies.

The next number appealed to the older element of the audience, for it was an arrangement of southern melodies and tunes well known. "Cotton Top Bag" by Fillmore, was a popular number. "The Boat Song" by Voit was next featured as a flute solo by Frances Gordon. Felix Arndt's famous concert selection, "Nola," was followed by the "Queen City March," by Nogel, played by the group. AUSTRIAN OFFICIALS TO UNVEIL NEW MEMORIAL

Chancellor Dr. Seipel and Cardinal Archbishop Piffl were the patrons of the unveiling and consecration ceremony. The Austrian social democrats criticized severely what they called a "monarchist manifestation" of the Chancellor of the Republic.

MOUSER ADVOCATES WAR ON PENCE LAW

Gives Speech Urging G. O. P. To Take Definite Stand for Repeal

Declaration that the Republican party should take a definite and determined stand for repeal of the Pence law, which permits public utility companies of Ohio to collect contested rate increases under bond, was made by Grant E. Mouser, Jr., assistant attorney general, in an address before the Women's Republican Club of Ohio at the Neil House in Columbus last night.

"The Republican party should insert in unequivocal language a statement in the platform to the effect that it favors repeal of the iniquitous legislation known as the Pence law," the former Marion city solicitor said.

"I refer," he continued, "to the section which gives a utility the right before any judicial determination has been made to collect under bond at the expiration of 120 days a schedule of rates filed with the public utilities commission regardless of the propriety of that rate.

"It is strange that Ohio is the only state in the Union that has such a legislative act. Public utilities have a monopoly and are guaranteed operative expenses and a percentage of return upon reproduction value and in addition an arbitrary percentage for amortization. It follows that a just determination should be had of the reasonableness and justness of a rate prior to the time it is collected from the people."

Mouser declared candidates for governor should "make a declaration in unmistakable terms of their attitude toward the repeal of this iniquitous legislation."

PREDICT BIG MEETING OF FIRE CHIEFS HERE

State Association Looking for Record Attendance and Exhibits Next Month

Additional reports received from committees having charge of various phases of the program continue to bear out the belief of Fire Chief McFarland that the convention of the Ohio State Fire Chiefs' Association here on June 5 6 and 7 will be the largest ever held by the organization.

In addition to approximately 250 chiefs from all parts of the state who are expected to be present, the convention will be featured by a larger display of fire-fighting equipment than has been at any convention in the past, Chief McFarland said today.

A large display of accessories is also expected to be a part of the exhibit. The LaFrance Co., of Elmira, N. Y., in addition to seeking space for the exhibition of several pieces of fire-fighting apparatus, is asking for 20 feet additional space for the display of the latest accessories.

There will also be displays of manufacturers from Buffalo, Cincinnati, Columbus and Chicago. The Prospect Fire Engine Co., will have two of its pumpers on exhibition.

A tentative program has been prepared, Chief McFarland said today, but it will not be announced until later. Tuesday and Thursday and Wednesday morning will be given over entirely to business matters, while Wednesday afternoon and night will be spent at Crystal Lake park, where demonstrations of various kinds will make up the program.

Plans under consideration at the present time, also provide for a large display of fireworks in the evening.

Big Produce Men Meet

Will Rogers Hobnobs with Butter and Egg Gentry and Gets Hop to the Business; Railroad Presidents There, Too

BY WILL ROGERS

WELL, all I know is just what I read in the papers and what little I can give the once over as I prowl around. I been covering a lot of ground here lately, I don't care where you live, I have been there. I was in and around Chicago for a few days, and the old town is really trying to behave itself. Big Bill has made quite a lot of friends by the way he took his beating at the primary election. He hasent made any squawk. He just said "They licked us good and I have no excuses to make." Course a lot of them have counted him out too quick. He is not through by a long shot. He will deal a many a political machine misery before he is through. There was a few murders while I was there, but not enough to keep up the town's reputation.

You know you hear a lot of jokes about the "Butter and Egg Men"; Well, sir, I must tell you about them. They opened the most beautiful building, 17 stories high, and they had a Big Banquet and I happened to be there to help them annoy. Now you say what kind of a fellow is a Butter and egg man? Well, he has gained a reputation as a spender. He is supposed to peddle a car of eggs, and then go into a Cabaret and shoot the whole receipts. Those babies will take the price of a truck load of butter and just smear it all over a Cabaret dance floor.

Cold Storage Tribute

It is a beautiful building, a tribute to "Cold Storage." They deal in "Fresh eggs." That means any egg that has been layed, (or laid) during the lifetime of any member. They even go so far as to say that the real fresh egg is no good; that it should lay in the cold storage few months to kinder give it an idea of what its functions are to be when spread out on the plate. Their whole organization is very much against people going in for soft boiled eggs, for that is when you can detect the "Bad babies." They claim that people should eat 'em scrambled, it's "Much healthier." You know seeing that building just gives you an idea what the hen can really do when she sets her mind to it. Hard work, perserverance, and taking advantage of your opportunities, that's what the old pullet has done. Nothing but an old dominick hen has erected that shack. It's the greatest "Chicken Coop" in the world, and houses many an egg.

And say while we are giving all this credit to the Hen, lets give the old Rooster a hand. There is a baby that don't really get the credit that is due him. Yet every time he crows that means another trade on the exchange. And Butter too. It's through robbing the calf that you get the milk to make the butter. If they hadent tied the old calf off early enough there would have been no building.

Landmark to Progress

Wrigley built a wonderful tower in Chicago just out of Chewing Gum, (of which I contributed an unproportionate share) and the Chicago Tribune has a beautiful building that was built on old Editorials on Mayor Thompson. But this Butter and egg hatchery is the first one built that is a monument to Hen and Heifer.

Ith a landmark to the progress of the Middle man. The farmer, the producer, is lucky if he can get a new hen roost during his lifetime, and the Consumer enjoys his one egg in the poor house, but the Broker or the middle man has certainly seen that some profit was dropped on the way from the farmer to the eater. For 80 percent of the dress suits in the hall were bought outright, and yet you cant "Corner" the egg market like you can the wheat, or corn. You see, in those commodeties you know how much is raised, and there can be no more that year, but with the eggs and Butter, just about the time you think you have cornered them why some old hen that has never heard one of Judge Lindseys debates on "Birth Control" bobs up and throws discretion to the winds, and starts laying on a mass production basis, and there goes your "corner." And the same with Butter. Some inventive genius will frame up some new way of hooking a New Ford car onto a "Churn" and there goes your "Corner." For up goes Butter production. You know you can buy car loads of eggs on "Futures" just like you can Wheat.

Railroad Men Present

So get you some good December eggs, and hold em till everybody looms like they just cant go through the winter without an egg-nog, and then you can sell your eggs and clean up. If you can't keep up your payments on the cold storage, why hard boil the eggs and save em till summer and then sell em for "Picnics." A Guy on a Picnic will eat anything, thats why its called a Picnic is because of the things you have to put up with. You know right along about now is the midst of the laying season for hens. They like to be like house wives, and get all their spring work over with, and then take a much needed rest. The funny part about it is, that they all seem to want to lay at the same time, and then lay off at the same time. If they could fix em so part would lay one three months and part of the next three and so on, that would make it better, but then you would hurt the Cold Storage guy. It looks like he is the fellow that has got to these hens and got em to all act in unison.

Oh yes, and we had all the railroad men there that night too. They collect millions and millions of bucks, shipping the butter and eggs from west to east. Imagine shipping an egg all the way from Petaluma, California, to Great Neck, Long Island. Then we call ourselves an efficient people! Why don't they have the hens and lay the eggs back there. It dont matter where a hen is, if she wants to lay she will lay. She is not willing, or interested in any real estate anywhere, and where she is don't make much difference to her. She knows that there is three months that she has to lay and she dont care where they are just so she can lay em and get em over with. But these R. R. Presidents were there to see that nobody did any fool think like that and moved producer too close to consumer. That's what keeps them R. R. Presidents in keeping the rates as far away from the eater as possible.

Would You Want Back The Old Days?

Often you hear the cry—"Give me back the good old days." But would you want to go back to the "old days" when the horse and buggy were the mode of transportation—when in the winter you hugged a coal stove, scorched your face and froze your back—oil lamps were the only light.

Then came Gas and the old days went by the board. Homes were made comfortable—industries were able to flourish—towns grew and people were made more prosperous and happy.

Now, has come another day. Your Gas Company is no longer able to deliver gas to Marion as cheaply as before. Gas must be brought a greater distance—costs have mounted and today we are all faced with the fact that GAS IS WORTH MORE.

Walsh's Withdrawal From Democratic Race Said To Rivet Smith Nomination

Reed Not To Quit Contest, However, He Says; No Forecast That Convention Will Be Love-Feast; Fight Over Platform Is Seen

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
Star Staff Correspondent

Washington, May 5—Senator Thomas J. Walsh's withdrawal from the Democratic presidential race was accepted today by the shades of Democratic leaders gone to Washington as Copperhead opposition to the nomination of Gov. Al Smith.

Although a few of the most radical bitter-enders against Smith concurred in Senator Walsh's analysis of the situation—that it was futile to advance the claims of a favorite son party leadership in the encroaching campaign—even these are convinced that Smith cannot be stopped, they are not saying so publicly for obvious political reasons.

The withdrawal of Walsh, who was backed and sponsored from the outset by William G. McAdoo and the so-called McAdoo group," leaves but one anti-candidate in opposition to the New York governor, Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, who has approximately 65 votes to date, as against more than 500 for Smith.

Reed Won't Quit

Senator Reed does not intend to quit, but has based his entire campaign on the issue of "corruption in government" and intends to go ahead with it.

"I entered this contest," said Reed, "because I believed some one representative of Jeffersonian democracy and devoted to the opposing of Washington ought to come out to undertake the task. There are issues in this campaign which touch the hearts and consciences of American people and the convention at Houston will at last have an opportunity to vote on them.

"I am glad Senator Walsh has withdrawn. He clarifies the situation and centers the issue. I only wish he had reached his conclusion before he had tested the waters by entering the Nebraska primary."

Although he did not say so directly, Senator Reed left the impression that so long as he is concerned Governor Smith is a satisfactory candidate until he expresses himself on this "corruption in government" issue which the Missourian believes out-ranks all others in the campaign.

Meet Again May 18

Reed and Smith will come to grips again in Oregon on May 18, and in West Virginia on May 29, without the diverting factor of the Walsh candidacy. Reed ran second to Smith in California.

While Walsh's withdrawal forecasts the nomination of Smith at Houston, it does not by any means follow that the Texas convention is to be any grand and glorious Democratic love feast. Wounds such as the party has experienced in the last four years do not heal so easily, nor are great differences so easily reconciled.

In the opinion of many Democrats here, both South and anti-Smith, the main fight will now be transferred from the candidates to the platform.

William G. McAdoo saw and presumably approved Walsh's statement of withdrawal before it was issued. So did several others who are militantly dry.

It is the determined purpose of this wing of the party to force into the Houston platform a militant prohibition plank—not a mere law enforcement plank, but a plank which specifically commits the party to the inherent evil and righteousness of prohibition.

Might Be Muddle

The platform is adopted before the candidate is named. Should this faction succeed in putting into the platform such a declaration, it would put a nice question up to the New York governor, for he has repeatedly and publicly proclaimed his disbelief in the principle of prohibition, although always asserting that so long as the law is on the statute books it should be enforced.

Even his opponents admit that the New York governor is a blunt and courageous man. It is entirely within the range of possibility, they believe, that Governor Smith would decline to stand on a platform which specifically committed him to advocating the inherent righteousness of prohibition, because it would obviously be out of variance with his well known views.

Hence unable to stop the New York governor through the delegate route, it might be possible to do it through the platform.

Grave International Crisis Feared as Japanese Block Chinese

marauding bands which have broken away from the Southern commands.

The small group of Americans remaining in Tsinan, China, are not in any immediate danger as the result of the Japanese offensive in the opinion of the State Department.

On Jan. 1 the department had its consular representatives in Tsinan to make a careful check of the Americans in that city. The number at that time was approximately 70. Since then, however the majority of these had moved down to the seaport city of Tsingtao, which is under Japanese control and where there is stationed a fleet of American submarines and destroyers. It is not believed there are more than 20 or 25 Americans remaining in Tsinan, of that many.

BLAME JAPANESE
Chinese Nationalist Government Sends Note to Premier Tanaka

Shanghai, May 5—The Chinese Nationalist government today sent a note to Premier Tanaka of Japan, accusing the Japanese of responsibility for the hostilities at Tsinan (Tsinfang), capital of Shantung Province.

The note alleges that Japanese murdered the national commissioner at Tsinan and 10 of his assistants, raided the nationalist foreign affairs bureau at Tsinan and set it on fire.

The communication protests against the despatch of Japanese troops to Tsinan.

It is reliably reported that another violent outbreak of fighting between Chinese and Japanese developed at Tsinan at 8 o'clock last night (Chinese time.)

During heavy cannonading a large section of the commercial district was destroyed. Hundreds of houses were set on fire and destroyed.

The Japanese casualties were put at 300 including soldiers and civilians.

Nationalist headquarters claim that 1,000 Chinese have been killed in the Tsinan area and 1,000 wounded, including soldiers, government officials and civilians.

DAVIS DISAPPROVES BILL AWARDING MEDAL TO ACE

Washington, May 5—Secretary of War Davis today disapproves a bill to award the Congressional Medal of honors to Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, American ace in the world war.

Rickenbacker already has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross with seven oak leaf clusters. Davis wrote the House Military Affairs Committee, and he deemed the honor sufficient.

The bill was introduced by Representative Clancy, Republican, of Michigan.

DAME ETHEL SMYTH FLAYS VIEWS OF MEN

London—Women are the victims of "sex jealousy," in the opinion of Dame Ethel Smyth, the famous English woman composer and Doctor of Music.

Dame Ethel, who has established a brilliant reputation here, delivers an adequate reply to Lord Birkenhead, Secretary of State for India, who recently asserted men are better than women in many walks of life, in a book just published here.

Man, in Dame Ethel's idea of things, has formed what "almost amounts to an anti-social combine to keep women out of the running as long as possible—or when that can't be done, to pretend their getting the big plums—all the more dangerous because it is done secretly."

CONFISCATED AUTO PLACED IN SERVICE

Rum Car Seized by Police Used as Temporary Conveyance for Fire Chief

The Hudson sedan taken by the police when they arrested Joe Gallo and Louis Ferrante, both of Akron, on charges of transporting intoxicating liquor two week ago has been appropriated by Fire Chief McFarland to be used while new tires are being secured for his car.

Manufacture of the Cole 8 car, such as is used by the chief has been discontinued and it has become practically impossible to secure new tires, the chief said this morning. It is probable that they will have to be made to order. The same is also experienced when parts are needed for the car. It has become next to impossible to secure parts and they must be made on special order as a rule.

PUSH FLOOD BILL DESPITE AXE THREAT

Conference Report To Be Brought Before House for Final Action

Washington, May 5—Warned for the third time that President Coolidge may veto the Jones Red flood control bill, pilots of the legislation nevertheless prepared today to push the bill through at last stages to the executive's desk.

The conference report, on which managers for Senate and House agreed to iron out the differences of the two bodies, was to be brought before the House today for final action.

Because of the overwhelming vote for the bill in both branches and the speed with which conferees composed the differences of the two bodies, approval by the House was expected with similar Senate action to follow quickly.

THREE ALARMS CALL OUT FIREMEN HERE

Burning Grass at Cemetery Menaces Buildings; Autos Slightly Damaged

A grass fire at St. Mary's cemetery starting from sparks from a rubbish burner, resulted in a call for the fire department yesterday afternoon when the flames threatened a row of garages facing the cemetery on the Superior st. side.

Myra Burton Barr, 225 Superior st. was burning a quantity of loose paper in a rubbish burner at the rear of her home when sparks from the burner set fire to the dry grass. The grass burned rapidly and the blaze was creeping toward the garages when firemen from the central station arrived. The fire was beaten out before any damage resulted.

Autos on Fire

At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon Fire Chief McFarland with several men from the central fire station responded to a call sent in from N. Main st., where an automobile had caught fire. Clerks in the Crawbaugh Hardware store, in front of which the car was parked had partly subdued the blaze with a fire extinguisher before the firemen arrived. The damage to the car, which was the property of R. W. Van Meter of near Morral was slight.

A second call to extinguish an automobile fire, came in at 6:57 o'clock last night when firemen from the central station were called to the home of R. L. Hogan, 450 Windsor st. where a Willys-Knight sedan belonging to Hogan and parked in front of his home became ignited. The blaze was put out with chemicals with a slight damage. The fire is thought to have started from defective wiring.

FLU EPIDEMIC NOT IN EVIDENCE HERE

Marion Escapes Ailment Reported Prevalent in Other Ohio Cities

An epidemic of a mild form of influenza which according to Dr. C. P. Robbins, chief of the division of communicable diseases, of the State Board of Health, has been sweeping over many sections of the state, has not been prevalent in this city to any marked degree, Dr. W. J. Weisel, city health commissioner, said this morning.

A mild form of influenza among children which was reported several weeks ago, died out, the commissioner said, and at the present time there is but little more sickness than is usually present at this time of the year.

Columbus is reported as the community suffering from waves of both measles and the flu. Other cities in the state who are said to be hit by waves of measles and influenza are Greenville, Troy and Tiffin.

JOHN M'GRATH, 74, FOUND DEAD IN BED

Organic Heart Trouble Causes Sudden Demise at Home on Oak-st

John McGrath, 74, custodian of the Knights of Columbus lodge and club rooms here, was found dead in bed about 6 o'clock this morning at his home, 289 Oak st. Although not thought to have been in serious condition he had been ill for about a year. Organic heart trouble was given the cause of death.

Funeral arrangements will be made after the arrival of relatives from out-of-town. The funeral will probably be Tuesday.

Mr. McGrath was one of Marion's veteran construction superintendents and had charge of a number of important building projects as well as of railroad improvements before his retirement from that class of work a number of years ago. He served as construction foreman for the building of Susquehanna Silk Mill.

Mr. McGrath was born in this city Dec. 24, 1853 and was the son of Edward and Catherine McGrath, natives of Ireland. He was married in Van Wert to Miss Jennie Murphy, whose death occurred in May two years ago. He was a member of St. Mary's Catholic church and of the Knights of Columbus.

Surviving him are three daughters, Mrs. Ralph Chas. of Bucyrus, Mrs. Thomas Sotter, Bellevue, Ky., and Miss Ina Walterhouse at home, four sons, Edward McGrath of New York City and William Bernard and Albert McGrath of Chicago, two brothers, Michael McGrath of Columbus and William McGrath of Ohio, 14 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Dwight F. Davis says the most difficult flood control problem is "to keep the Mississippi in its banks and out of politics." Most difficult! Apparently, it's impossible.

It's hard to understand. Thousands upon thousands of misguided people are still paying out good money down in Florida for hotel bills, and right up here in the heart of the garden spot of the world the balmy spring breezes wafted along a temperature of eighty-four yesterday.

The Texas horned toad rescued alive from the cornerstone of a courthouse laid thirty-one years ago has been displayed by prominent figures in the Lone Star state to President Coolidge. There's never any telling. They're liable to try to get that poor toad to broadcast over the radio next.

There's little occasion for surprise that the senate radicals who call themselves "Progressives" are doing their utmost to block the passage of the naval construction bill. Isn't that just what naturally would be expected of them?

President Coolidge attended a circus in Washington, one day this week, and the pictures show him negotiating a real, for-sure smile. We thought all along that he would be able to pull off a stunt like that some day if he set his mind to it.

The sale of the famous "Chimney Corner" site in New York City, this week, for $725 a square foot, calls attention to the fact that one piece of property in that city is shown by the taxation figures to be worth almost $750 a square foot. Those Indians certainly pulled off a mighty poor bargain.

The plane in which she first attempted an east-to-west flight across the North Atlantic having been wrecked at Horta in the Azores, Lillie Dillenz, the Viennese actress, is ready to hop off whenever the weather is propitious on a flight from Dublin to New York. Aviation Accidents Last Year.

One hundred and sixty-four lives were lost and 149 persons were injured as the result of aviation accidents in the United States last year. This is the summary, the first of its kind to be made, given out by the aeronautic branch of the department of commerce, which, at the beginning of 1927, put into operation the plan of investigating every serious air disaster.

The summary carries many other figures, from some of which very profitable lessons may be had, not the least of which is that there is always added hazard in flying with an unlicensed pilot or in an untested machine.

The department's figures show that, of the 200 accidents suffered in 1927, only six occurred on scheduled flights over air routes and that only one of the seven persons killed in the excepted six accidents was a passenger, the six others killed being pilots. Of the 167 aeroplanes smashed in the 200 crashes, only thirty-four were government-licensed planes; while of the pilots killed, eighty-three were unlicensed and only seventeen licensed. Of the 164 fatalities, twenty-four were found to have been made in experimental flights in planes which not only were untested, but were also of a character out of the ordinary line—machines of novel design. Mistakes made by pilots, the summary shows, were responsible for seventy-eight deaths, or forty-eight per cent, of all the fatalities of the year.

If the figures of the commerce department show anything, they show that flying with licensed pilots in tested machines on scheduled flights over air routes is comparatively safe, and that flying in untested machines, or with unlicensed pilots, or on other than scheduled flights over air courses is hazardous. Scheduled flights over air routes mean straight flying—free from stunts—with tested and properly-inspected machines handled by expert pilots. Any other kind of flying may mean anything and the one making them must necessarily assume an added risk.

British Railroad Records.

A prominent Ohio morning paper, editorially speaking of the records being made by British railroads which the roads of other lands are unable to touch, and citing the achievement "of the London, Midland & Scottish railroads in establishing non-stop train services between London and Glasgow and London and Edinburgh, both distances of about 400 miles," says:

"British railroads are able to outstrip those of foreign countries primarily because of the excellence of their roadbeds. Where it was necessary in this country to make initial capital available for construction go a long distance and thus build cheaply, England with an abundance of capital built well and was particularly careful to avoid heavy grades such as occur through our mountainous areas. The comparatively short distances to be covered in England as contrasted with the great distances here also contributed to the same result."

The foregoing is good, so far as it goes, in explaining the high speed and the long non-stop runs made by the finer British trains, but it is far from all the story. There are other factors which have enabled the British to hang up the records they have achieved.

One of these other factors is the size and power of their motive power. There was a time, and not so long ago, when the British engines were small, but even then one might know the distance he traveled by figuring a mile, on the faster trains, for each minute enroute. But in the last four or five years mighty locomotives with immense drive-wheels have been put into operation with results which have surprised even the British, who have long been accustomed to mile-a-minute trains.

But a factor of no less importance in the fast, long-distance, non-stop runs being made than the wonderful roadbeds and motive power is the absolute elimination of all grade crossings. Every country road, every city or village street crossing, is either above or below the tracks. The traveler on fast British trains never gets an opportunity to look up or down a highway or street at grade, and he finds himself traveling a full speed through cities and villages on tracks high up in the air. Whether passing through a large city or a small population center, the traveler beholds a sea of roof-tops.

Thus the British fast trains speed on unretarded by any municipal regulations. There are no stops and starts to waste time and eat up power. Time is saved, fuel is saved and, more than that, the nerve of the engine crew is saved. The driver—we believe that is what the engineer is called over in Britain—knows that he isn't going to hit a motor car, a team, or a trespasser. Vehicles can't get onto the right-of-way and trespassers do not. Trespassing upon British railroad rights-of-way is sure to lead to an arrest, and the British just naturally keep off railroad rights-of-way. Thus the British engine driver and his stoker can give their undivided attention to their engine, and the track ahead, free from the fear of any grade-crossing accident. Their engine is powerful, the roadbed is an near perfect as a roadbed can be, the grades are light and the working part of the rolling stock in fine condition. Little wonder that the railroads of no other land can compete in time and non-stop runs with the fast British trains.

The official figures show that the plurality of Louis L. Emmerson over Governor Len Small, of Illinois, in the primary of April 10 is 439,743. Really, it begins to look as though the people of the Sucker state have committed themselves to decent government!

A reduction of the gross public debt in excess of $1,000,000,000 was made in the first ten months of the present fiscal year, leaving "only" $9,638,383,450 outstanding in Liberty bonds. Isn't it great to live in a land where you can refer to $9,638,383,450 like that?

The senate committee appointed to investigate the campaign expenses of presidential candidates is up a stump, not being able to decide whether it is supposed to investigate the expenses of all aspirants or only those of nominees. Huh! Let's get as much humor out of the situation as we can. Let's force every aspirant to tell in advance how much he expects to expend.

Variety Gives Rest to Nerves.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Once in a great while you meet a person who claims he was never tired in his life. Such individuals are rare indeed. Most of us get tired too often and too much. Modern life is so filled with temptations to overdo that fatigue is becoming more and more a factor in the production of disease.

By fatigue, I mean weariness of the whole body—a general exhaustion from the over use of mind or muscles. It is probable that nature intended each of us to perform each day such an amount of work as would bring us at evening tired enough to seek refreshing slumber. That is one thing, but to be utterly exhausted each day is another.

It may be said that fatigue is the foundation for almost every ill to which flesh is heir. The first serious effect of fatigue is noticed in the nervous system. It may be evidenced in sleeplessness. When you are honestly tired you sleep well. But when you are overtired, or fatigued, the nervous system does not respond normally, and sleeplessness may result.

When the causes of fatigue are permitted to continue, there may be a neuralgia of some sort. It may take the form of sciatica or lumbago, headache, earache or neuritis. It will be noted that we have now to deal, not only with fatigue from the original cause but, by reason of the resulting pain and sleeplessness, with a still further exhaustion of the system.

When once the nervous system is deranged it is only a step to some more serious disturbance. It may well be then, that fatigue is responsible, not only for physical but mental ills as well. Fatigue lowers the resistance of the body too, so that it becomes easier for the ever watchful disease germs to attack us.

Every one should have an occupation that will afford him an outlet for his energies. Good honest work, physical or mental, is necessary for the well-being of every one. But you should not carry this work beyond the point which experience shows is enough. This point can be recognized by anyone who gives thought to his health.

There is always the temptation to overdo for one engaged in work which holds the interest. To keep at it too long, will bring in a reaction and this is bound to be detrimental. Any sort of work, physical or mental, which is carried to a point where the nerve force is exhausted and the heart is caused to flag, is bound to result in dangerous fatigue. This is work carried beyond the safety point into the danger zone. Calamity awaits him who persists in this practice.

Aside from avoiding overwork, a person who wishes to escape fatigue should guard against "getting in a rut." His recreation should be as dissimilar from his workday routine as his tastes will permit. It is easy to get into the mental state of the motorman who spent his vacation riding on the street cars. Perhaps this motorman got the necessary change and relaxation in having other motormen start and stop the cars at his command for a couple of weeks, but it is safe to say that he would have benefited far more from a fishing trip or a few ball games.

Moderation in eating, regularity in bathing and cultivation of tranquility of mind, all have their value in protecting you. But probably the greatest of all safeguards is sleep. The tendency of modern man is to undersleep. There are famous men who have done great work and who have lived long on four or five hours sleep at night. But they are exceptions. Eight hours sleep is a necessity for most persons and nine hours of peaceful slumber is better for the great majority of workers.—Copyright, 1928, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

"INTREPID FRENCHMAN."

A hero too seldom recalled for the great work he did for America in the revolution stalked across the news pages a few days ago when the heart of Admiral de Grasse was ceremoniously placed beside the body of his wife at Tilly. Ambassador Myron T. Herrick made the address of the day, reviewing the service performed by the Frenchman who scattered the British fleet off Cape Henry, permitting Washington and Rochambeau to squeeze Cornwallis into his fatal corner.

In the ancient chateau of de Grasse, the home of his ancestors and of himself near Paris, is now conducted an orphanage where gardening and agriculture are taught, particularly to the children left homeless and fatherless by the late war. Herrick and Marshal Foch are vice presidents of the institution, the excellent quality of whose work is attested by the Cleveland man.

Americans are familiar with the services rendered their infant country by such Frenchmen as La Fayette and Rochambeau, but the work of de Grasse has too often passed unnoticed. Yet Washington told the admiral that the honor for the surrender at Yorktown belonged to him. It was de Grasse who, without orders from his government, left his station in the West Indies, borrowed troops from the islands, persuaded society women to pawn their jewels to finance his venture and sailed to intercept the British fleet which had been sent down from New York to succor Cornwallis. Accomplishing the task, de Grasse went back south, returned his borrowed soldiers and then, as it were, stepped out of history.

The sentiment that sustained the revolution was at lowest ebb when de Grasse sailed gallantly to the rescue; he turned despair to quick victory. The "intrepid Frenchman," as is enemies called him, well merits everything said of him at Tilly.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CALIFORNIA PRIMARIES.

While California Republicans were voting Tuesday, overwhelmingly, indeed unanimously, for Herbert Hoover, as the state's favorite son, for the presidential nomination, the Democrats of the state gave their indorsement to Governor Smith of New York by a heavy majority. There was no Golden State Democrat in the field. Governor Smith's name was opposed by Senators Reed, of Missouri, and Walsh, of Montana, and both were defeated in the primary by large margins. The California delegation at Houston will vote for Smith.

This primary has been regarded as a test of strength. If either Reed or Walsh should gain the delegation the Smith boom would be checked. But the result shows that the "field" against the Democratic favorite for the nomination was not only divided, but that altogether its strength was not as great as that of Smith.

Comparison of the total votes cast by the two parties is significant. There is evidently little chance of California, if Hoover is nominated, failing to cast its electoral vote for him in November. And yet the Hoover vote yesterday was not the full Republican strength in the state, for the reason that there was no contest in the Republican primary and consequently no particular reason for a heavy registration of preferences.

The casting of this vote for Hoover in California has no especial significance as regards the nomination prospect, for the state's delegation was conceded to him. Nevertheless the impressive size of the ballot in an uncontested primary is calculated to hearten his supporters and to give them an additional "selling argument" in their campaign work during the coming month.—Washington Star.

SOMEBODY PAYS FOR THE FREE HORSE.

The postal rate reduction now contemplated by congress in the Griest bill goes a short distance in the right direction, but it does not go far enough. House, senate and the administration seem agreed that cuts more drastic than those provided in the Griest bill can not be made, because the post-office department already is running its business at an annual loss.

Which leads the New York World to offer a suggestion that is worthy of careful consideration at Washington. The postal deficit is largely piled up by the free carriage of tons and tons of franked mail matter emanating from the various government department and from the offices of members of congress.

Why not, suggests the World, do away altogether with the practice, as old as the postal service, of franking government mail? Instead of charging the cost of this free service up to the post-office department, why not charge it up to the agencies of government that call for free service? Instead of assessing a bill that should be met by the general public against the heavy users of the postal service, why not assess this bill against the nation as a whole?

Well, why not? Until something like this is done, nobody can tell whether the post-office department is making or losing money on the paid portion of its business.—Minneapolis Journal.

Is Walking a Lost Art?

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

The lengthening days bring on the spell of the country. On holidays and Sundays the autos streaming past my dooryard in the bright morning sunshine look like glittering black beetles, with a few blazing red and yellow ones among them, rushing like mad to get somewhere first. They are pouring from the city, and they go like schoolboys let out. It is the "glory of motion" that most of them seek, but they will get more or less of the glory of the country, too, even if they do not look for it.

The greatest blessing that the automobile has given is this urge to get out into airy spaces, among the trees, fields, streams, under a smokeless sky, where nature is still to be seen. It brings a vast expansion of the joy of life. But there is an older joy which it should not be permitted to displace—the joy of meeting nature on foot. If every auto ride could be supplemented with a foot excursion to the summit of an inviting hill, or through a forest trail, or along the course of a stony-bedded stream, new pleasures would be added and more health-giving exercise obtained.

Nature and man are old acquaintances, and she will not let him go. He has many temptations to stay away from her in these days, but a mere glance often brings him back. When he is ill, he longs for her. Sometimes her influence seems mysterious to him. Hear Emerson:

"Crossing a bare common, in snow-puddles, at twilight, under a clouded sky, without having in my thoughts any occurrence of special good fortune, I have enjoyed a perfect exhilaration. I am glad to the brink of fear. In the woods, too, a man casts off his years, as the snake its slough, and, in what period soever of life, is always a child. In the woods is perpetual youth."

How well the truth of that is known to those who have lived long in the country! A Sunday morning walk in the woods, amidst the quiet of the holy day, finding rare flowers that never bloom in the open, hearing and seeing the coy inhabitants who are a little suspicious of you, breathing perfumes that belong only to the woods — this, however heretical it may sound, is for a thoughtful, impressionable person often better than a sermon and a song by the choir.

In the East our Appalachian clubs are yearly adding more miles to their "long trails" which, traversing the heights and dipping through the valley, may almost be said to form a chain from the Carolinas to the Aridondacks and the mountains of Vermont and New Hampshire. To follow that chain, on foot, from end to end would be a summer's rapture. Nor are short walks to be disdained. The art of walking is not known to every stepper. Walking breeds thought. Many a poem has been born from a stroll. Many a great speech has been wrought out of the marble during a long, lonely walk. No physical exercise reacts so stimulantly upon the brain as pedestrianism. When man began to walk erect, he began to perceive and to think; and the organism remembers its prime. If human locomotion should ever be made purely mechanical, the triumph of mind over matter would not be unalloyed; humanity would lose much that now gives it delight and keeps it closer to the constitution of things.—Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

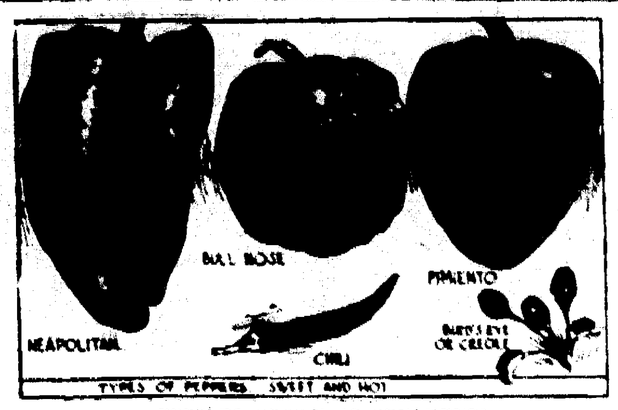
IN YOUR GARDEN



TYPES OF PEPPERS SWEET AND HOT

PEPPERS GROWN AS ORNAMENTS

ONE vegetable that has developed itself into an ornamental pot plant is the pepper. The Celestial and Red's Eye Peppers make little bushes covered with their brilliant fruits for early winter ornamentation and have quite a vogue in the market. They are as easily raised by the home gardener as are the big peppers so much used in salads and cookery of various sorts.

These little peppers are of the hot type and valuable for condiments which demand hot instead of sweet peppers.

The large sweet peppers, gathered and eaten while they are still green and before assuming the brilliant scarlet of maturity, are the most popular form of this valuable vegetable. They are being grown more and more by gardeners and are one of the popular vegetables for the show bench, both in their green and showy ripe form.

April-sown seed gives a fine supply of plants for a fall crop. For earlier peppers, it will be necessary to buy plants from seed houses or market gardeners. They need to be sown indoors as they are of tropical ancestry and shrivel at the touch of frosty winds. They grow very readily from seed and are one of the easy vegetables to raise at home. A packet of seeds will give an ample supply and an ounce will produce a thousand plants.

As soon as the seedlings have made two or three leaves transplant them into boxes or small pots and let them grow along until it is time to plant them out. Peppers should be set out about corn planting time. It is time to get the seed started now. They want very rich soil and delight in moist soil and also seem to relish frequent sprinkling of their tops. Chinese Giant is a favorite sort and Ruby King is another highly esteemed sort. A cross between the two, Ruby Giant, is rapidly gaining favor. Chinese Giant is very late in maturing. Neapolitan is one of the earlier maturing types. The Pimento is the thickest fleshed of the sweet peppers and of handsome form.

BREMEN FLIERS TO PLAY HORSES TODAY

"Long Shots" or "Sure Things" for Conquerors of Atlantic

New York, May 5—The Bremen fliers will take a flyer or two on the horses this afternoon at the Jamaica race track.

Baron Ehrenfried Guenther Von Huenefeld, Maj. James C. Fitzmaurice and Capt. Hermann Koehl have been bidden to seats of honor at the Long Island oval and told they can play long shots or "sure things," whichever strikes their fancy.

The 33rd race has been dubbed the Bremen fliers' handicap by the board of stewards.

Tonight the Atlantic conquerors are to be guests at the dinner by the city of Prince Pignatari, governor of Rome.

Tomorrow the three are to attend church, then journey to Yankee Stadium in hope of seeing Babe Ruth tap the ball for an on-stop flight over one of the garden fences.

From the diamond pastime they are scheduled to be feted at the German club then attend a dinner of the Catholic Club and a reception at the United Singers' Society clubrooms in Brooklyn.

ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR OHIO DELEGATES

Warner Outlines Hotel Arrangements at Meeting of Willis Group

Accommodations will be provided for at three hotels in Kansas City for Ohio's 51 delegates to the national G. O. P. Convention, Fred W. Warner of Marion, chairman of the state Republican committee, announced yesterday at a luncheon attended by 20 Willis-pledged delegates. The luncheon took place at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel.

The 20 Willis delegates probably will go to Kansas City to vote for any candidate they choose, it was indicated following the luncheon at which Col. Carmi A. Thompson, of Cleveland, campaign manager of the Willis forces, was host.

Willis delegates will travel to Kansas City in any manner they choose, but will not go in a body. Many are planning to drive. Efforts were made several weeks ago to have Hoover and Willis delegates travel on a special train.

Col. Thompson will sail Saturday for Cuba. While there he will arrange for the annual encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans to be held there in October.

MEETING DATE SET

Regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Oakland Evangelical Church will be held next Thursday night at the church.

NO, IT WON'T

IT won't be long now.

The jolly old radio entertainers who have been our boon companions for lo, these many moons, will soon fade out of the picture and we'll dust off the old picnic hamper, get the thermos bottle off the top shelf of the pantry, gather together two slices of bread separated by a huge hunk of ham, and a half dozen pickled eggs, and we're off. Even now, some of those who are wont to take to the open road with the first hint of the good old summer time have discovered more verdant and choicer picnic grounds. The first robin was sighted long ago, and I personally met the first bumble bee, strawhats, (I won't say they are this year's vintage,) have put in an appearance, arms have shed their sleeves like a caterpillar does his cocoon, so all we lack is time for our annual frolic with the ants and their kin.

OH, FOR LIGHTS

I THINK most of us will heave a sigh of relief when the new lights are in at the main stem of the village. If you crave thrills just spend a little time negotiating the four crossings at Main and Center-sts. I think even the folks that seemingly always can maintain a calm and collected mien, under the most extreme exasperating circumstances would forget they were ladies and hurl verbal darts unbecoming to them who on every other occasion seem to the manner born. Of course I had my feathers ruffled which is the cause of the explosion. There is very probable two sides to the question but I call it adding insult to injury when an autoist nearly runs over you and then bawls you out for being there. This particular motorist was entirely too close to me for comfort and then insinuated that it might be well for me to consult an ear doctor. Of course, I retorted that she might at least take heed of where she was going and intimated that her oculist might be out of the city. That's all there was time for, for she continued on her way and I did likewise but if any one heard the conversation he was not in doubt as to the fact we meant what we said. Of course, I hope now that what I wished then doesn't really happen to her and I suppose by this time she hopes that what she wished would happen to me doesn't take place.

PERSONALITY

DOES the perfume you buy express your personality. Just listen to this:

The vivid, "red head" can add a quiet air to her personality by using yellow violet, while the blonde should find perfume made from the attar of yellow firefly rose most appealing.

A pure sandalwood or natural jasmine contains an exotic yet sinuously fragile fragrance which will interpret the personality of the slue-eyed Oriental type, who is rather delicate in appearance.

The pale, languid chamer finds expression in the blending of the Southern magnolia with tuberose and jonquil. Another blend for this same type that is extremely youthful and fresh is found in a combination of cilbanum, vetiver and lots of ylang-ylang.

Narcissus is the ideal scent for the dark-haired, fair-skinned, scarlet-lipped beauty.

The modest woman is the hardest to help. She feels the esthetic need of a delicate scent and yet she is fearful of offending by an ill-choice of perfume. And for this type gardenia, combined with narcissus, neroli, tuberose, and just a wee drop of musk is ideal.

A drop on the handkerchief, another on the underwear, one on the hair or back of the ear is all that any woman should ever use.

Meditations OF A Married Woman

BY HELEN ROWLAND

MY Daughter, WHEN is a woman most charming in the eyes of men?

Behold, she is most desirable to any man, when she ceaseth her endeavors to be charming.

When she is cheerful at his coming, and not cast down at his going. When she exerteth not herself to entertain him, nor to impress him, and seeketh not to ensnare him.

When she ceaseth to doll up for his delight, and taketh no heed concerning whether her nose be powdered nor her lips be reddened, nor her locks marcelled, at the sound of his approach.

When she ceaseth to harken for his ring upon the telephone, and neglecteth to reproach him for forgetting his promises.

When his presence no longer thrilleth her, and she noteth not his absence, nor his stayings away.

When she ceaseth to consult his tastes or to ask his opinions concerning her ways of her new hats or her friends.

When she receiveth his approval with a smile of acquiescence—and his disapproval with a shrug of indifference.

When she no longer lieth awake, wondering whose lips he may be kissing or into whose eyes he may be gazing.

When she doeth no "stunts" to arouse his jealousy and stageth no "scenes" to pique his interest.

When she ceaseth to worry over him, to cater to him, to keep tabs on him an dto dream of him!

For lo, as a woman hangeth ornaments of silver and gold upon a Christmas tree, so doth she drape her illusions upon a man.

And not until these have fallen away, doth she see any man as he IS, and treat him as a human being.

Not until the stardust fallen from her eyes, doth she perceive that a man preferreth common sense to finesse, and comradeship to worship.

Therefore, is a woman always most desirable in a man's eyes, when she ceaseth to ADORE him, and beginneth to ENDURE him!

For then is she filled with naturalness and good humor and glorified with a mantle of sweet indifference.

Verily, verily, all that a man requireth of any woman is that she amuse him a little and let him ALONE!

SELAH.

'The Understanding Heart'

A Story of the California Forests

PETER B. KYNE

(Copyright, 1926, Peter B. Kyne by arrangement with King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

CHAPTER 41

MONICA'S recital had imbued her with a more forcible realization of her loss, and her tears flowed freely again.

"Oh, Tony," she sobbed, "tell me what to do."

"I can't, honey, but when I know what to do I'll do it for you. In the meantime, did your father give Uncle Charley a check for $5,000 when he left that section?"

"Why, Tony, My father distrusted Uncle Charley. He gave Uncle Charley $5,000 in cash. I remember the night they counted it out, spoonful after spoonful, on Uncle Charley's funny little scales. Uncle Charley had to be nasty, of course. He insisted on using his own scales. He said he had half a notion that father's scales were crooked. Of course he didn't mean it——"

"I understand, dear. He was just trying to live up to his reputation as the worst sport in these here mountings—the little sport that nobody could trap. . . . Well, I had hoped we might find a cancelled check to prove the payment—to corroborate your statement, you understand. Courts usually require corroborative evidence.

"However, we have one more ace up the sleeve of our kimono. Undoubtedly Uncle Charley had a lawyer draw up a deed, and of course, the very worst kind of jack-leg lawyer would have insisted on him that his signature to the deed must be acknowledged before a notary public. Who was the lawyer?"

"They didn't have a lawyer. The mining company's superintendent—the one Bob Mason killed—told them it was a simple thing to fill in the legal description of the property on a printed form of deed. He had one in his office and filled it in on his typewriter. He told them laughingly he would save them a lawyer's fee. However, he received his fee—a two-gallon demijohn of Uncle Charley's oldest and best!"

"And that important witness is dead. Well, I'll have to interview every notary public in the county. You see, Monica, when a notary public attests the signature on any sworn document he makes a notation of the nature of the document. He is required by law to do that.

"We'll make another search for the deed, Monica, and if we cannot find it I'll sue Uncle Charley's estate for you, and what with your testimony and the notary's record we'll make out a pretty good case. Perhaps we'll win."

"I haven't any money for law-suits," Monica replied drearily. "Now that Uncle Charley has died intestate the public administrator will administer his estate, will he not?"

"Unless Uncle Charley's next of kin should apply for and be granted letters of administration."

"Uncle Charley had no next of kin."

Tony Garland loaded his pipe and smoked thoughtfully for several minutes. "Well, Monica, we have a bridge to cross, of course, but we'll cross it when we come to it. Meanwhile I'll think of something. Love laughs at locksmiths, you know."

"To be as poor and as alone in the world as I am, Tony; to have $150,000 almost in my hands and then to have it withdrawn—that's terribly hard, Tony."

"Oh, I'll get it back for you, dear. Truth, crushed to earth, will rise again."

Monica leaned her tired head on his broad young shoulder for a moment. "Oh, Tony," she murmured, "you're so masterful and comforting. I've never met a man like you before."

"Please God you never may," he replied, and she felt his lithe body shake with a little inward chuckle. In a moment, however, he was serious. "What will you do when you're a rich lady?" he queried.

Monica raised her head and looked at him wistfully. "My plans are very indefinite Tony. That is another bridge we'll cross when we come to it."

"But how about the immense, and contemptuous world—down yonder?"

She kissed him lightly on the cheek. "In the fanciful phraseology of the Ive Uncle Charley," she whispered in his ear, "to hell with that!"

"Oh, you're delicious!" he cried, and hugged her to him. "I love you so much my heart hurts. And it isn't pantry love either, honey. The hurt started the day before yesterday."

"A man in a kitchen is a pathetic figure, Tony. Do run out and milk the goat."

"I think I ought to wash Pansy's udder carefully and let the young fellow rustle for himself," he suggested, with the odd, whimsical leer she found so tremendously amusing. "He's bound to feel more at home. Romulus and Remus were suckled by a she-wolf, you know, and Pansy's a sweet and gentle little creature. I'm certain she will not object."

"You're bound to experiment, aren't you?"

With a light laugh he poured some hot water in a pan, helped himself to soap and a towel and departed for the barn, where presently Monica heard him, singing a rollicking song of his soldier days.

"Oh, the dirty little adjutant's the worst one of them all,
He has you on the parade-ground to answer every call,
And if you are not steady at dress parade or drill,
Oh, it's 'Sergeant, do your duty Shove that rookie in the mill!'"

"He reminds me of a little over-grown boy," thought the girl happily. "He's so kind and thoughtful. I think he's a good man, too."

Had she been in a mood somewhat more philosophical she would have realized that men whose lives are lived as close to the earth as was Tony Garland's are, quite generally, simple, kind and wholly understanding creatures. It is the competition of civilized life that destroys the thing God made in His own image and likeness!

And Tony Garland, whimsical, humorous young rascal that he was, had his way with Pansy and the baby. He had the amiable Pansy in the living room with her head tied short to the leg of the table, and the baby held under her, gleaning sustenance from nature's fount, before Monica knew what he was doing. He called to her to come and see.

"An ounce of invention is worth a ton of horse power," he assured her with that grave solemnity that denotes the humorous country dweller. "The maternal spirit is strong in Pansy. She ought to have a family of her own——" He commenced singing softly an improvised parody on "The Wearin' o' the Green."

"Oh, I once knew a nanny-goat and Pansy was her name,
She had no children of her own, which really was a same,
But she met a brave young ranger and I'll tell you what he did,
He supplied her with a baby and she thought it was a kid."

"Second verse!" Monica demanded, childishly delighted at his magnificent nonsense.

"And when at last to manhood's state that goat-raised child attained
A blind man at a glance could see how badly he'd been trained
For he'd eat tin cans and paper, all while wagging of his chin,
And he didn't have a single friend, because he butted in!"

"Tony, you're a ridiculous boy!"

"Since you do not appreciate my minstrelsy, I'll not open my mouth again tonight."

"Oh, please do, Tony! Sing me the third verse. Please."

Garland resumed:

"Oh, he met a mountain maiden and unto her he said,
'I'd sure be delighted, miss, if me an' you could wed,'
But the maiden turned a haughty face and said, 'Go home to mater,
For I'll wed a forest-ranger! Thanks, I do not crave a satyr.'"

He had succeeded at last in driving the blue devils off Bogus. "And then what?" Monica pleaded childishly.

He heaved a deep sigh. "You're just like any little girl. Once a fellow starts to tell you a fairly-tale he's irrevocably lost. He must go on and on and on, over such a long way, until the hero comes at last to a little hut in the forest where the magician lives. The magician opens the door, in response to our hero's timid knock, and immediately says, 'Hocus, pocus, imporatus, abra cadabra,' which, literally translated, means this child is fed and it is now time to milk Pansy and put her back in the barn. To the wood-box with this infant."

Love's Embers

A Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

Message from the Secret Service Agent

As the words "K. seven!" came simultaneously from the lips of my father, Lillian and Allen Drake, I realized that they just had made a discovery most astounding to them. It takes something most extraordinary to jolt the composure of anyone of the three agents of the diplomatic secret service but something in the appearance of the packet which I had brought them from the red-bearded man had upset their usual poise.

It was my father who realized first that their exclamation and their excitement were unintelligible to me. With his fingers already tripping the cover from the packet, he stopped and held it out to me.

"Look, dear, in the corner!" he said.

My eyes followed his pointing finger and saw a tiny but remarkably well executed sketch of a mongrel dog holding up one paw as if lame. The next second, Allen Drake's hand clasping a pencil, showed me where the characters "K. seven" were cleverly hidden in the lines depicting the hurt paw.

"K. seven" is one of the mysteries of our service," my father said. "He plays a lone hand, is not connected in any official way with us, and nobody has the slightest clue to his identity. But whenever anything threatening the government is on the tapis, sooner or later we receive a communication from 'K. seven,' which helps us infinitely. He evidently has a wide and intimate knowledge of the cunning, devilish criminals whose menace is known by every government in the world. We of the service are rooting out one nest of them after another, but it seems an endless task. Sometimes I feel as if new groups of them are springing up faster than we can destroy the old ones."

"You know better than that, Chief," Lillian said briskly. "You are all worn out, that's the only trouble. Let's see what 'K. seven' has to say. By the way, have you ever noticed that while he always picks a different animal or bird for his monogram, it's always a lame or hurt one?"

My father nodded and held the packet out to her.

"Will you read it aloud, my dear?" he asked, and Lillian took from the envelope two enclosures—one a typewritten paper, the other an envelope bearing an inscription which she read aloud.

"To be read after the typewritten statement, and theft known to the Princess Olina of Transvania, known as Eleanor Lincoln, if it is necessary to convince her of the truth of the statements made in the typewritten paper."

"He evidently knows his repetables," Lillian commented, laying the letter aside, and spreading out the typed paper. She ran her eye down the page before reading it aloud, and I, closely watching her, again saw doubt around her mouth the day I met Olina which I knew would always remain in her. Yet when she began to read it to me I knew that she had already decided to do as I had asked her to do, and I knew that I could trust her to do the job, for it's too much for me to handle alone. If you don't know it already, Eleanor Lincoln is Princess Olina of Transvania, fugitive because she can't stand the old King of Trees for a husband. A woman in the palace, a supposed friend of the girl's, is in the pay of the gang I'm playing marbles with at present. Working on this friendship and giving her a whopping wad of mazuma—Olina had confided to her that she meant to run away—she persuaded the girl to carry a message to the woman's supposed brother in America, who was to give her a certain token establishing her identity. My gifted sidekick in the shack, who is posing as the brother, was unlucky enough to lose his little token, and if he knew I'd helped him lose it, I wouldn't be alive to write this. He's just got a duplicate from the other side and with it the enclosed letter which ought to open the young woman's eyes if you have any difficulty in persuading her to give up the package of explosive she's toting around with her."

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

I am always glad when Saturday comes. It rained some before I got up. If it is going to rain any time in the week it saves it up for Saturday. I got up and let Jubilee down early because a fella likes to make a long day of it on Saturday.

After I fed my face I had to clean the barn, and then my mother said she had a good mind to pay some paint and paint the barn or let me paint it. Panty said it is against the law for anyone but a painter to paint and when my mother said how come, he said, "My father is a union man and his father is a union man, and if my father let anyone but a union painter paint it he would get fired out of the union and wouldn't have any more job than a frog has got whiskers." My mother laughed at him, but she didn't get the paint, so I was let out when I got the barn cleaned.

Goop's brother is still taking a shot in the arm every day to keep him from getting rat hydrophobia and scratching someone from the rat I dropped on his head. I wish I was his doctor I would give him a shot in the pants.

We were over to the vacant lot get ting ready to play ball and we saw a kite way up in the air and Younkie wished she had a kite, so I told her I would go over to her place and make her one, so I did. When I got the kite done her mother wouldn't give her a dime to buy a nickel's worth of string with, so we didn't fly it.

After I had went home to dinner the bunch came over and Frenchy has a bunch of peacock feathers his father had got somewhere and wouldn't keep because they were unlucky. So we went out to the woods and were taking off our clothes to play Indian when we noticed the Lost Bag of Tripe wasn't taking his off and we all jumped on him, and his shirt was stuck to his back from the glue I had rubbed on it instead of anarchy the day Pickles hit him with a stone. We flung him down and Nibs and Peanuts sat on his legs whilst me and Petty got hold of his shirt tail and went to yank it off over his head, and we tore his whole shirt tail off. Then he went in swimming in the creek with what was left of his shirt and after a while it soaked off of him. I asted him how he was going to tell his mother he lost his shirt tail, and he said he was going to tell her the truth. I told him that was just like the dirty crook he is, and he hit me across the heeser with his wet shirt, and I didn't catch him.

I went to bed early. I thought mebby the Lost Bag of Tripe might come over with his mother and tell my father how he lost his shirt tail. But he didn't.
